M'ARTHUR WARNS OF RED BUILDUP

Senate Begins Troops Issue Voting Today

Divided On Whether U. S., USSR At War

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The "Great Debate" over sending more troops to Europe came right up to the voting stage tonight with senators split on the question of whether war with Russia already is under way.

Sen. Ives (R-NY) said it is, "very definitely." But Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) contended that unless war is declared by Congress, President Truman has no right to commit more troops to Europe's defense.

Tomorrow the talking stops and the voting begins. The Senate is ready to vote on resolutions approving the addition of four U. S. divisions to the new combined West European defense force. Democratic leaders say it's certain that Republican efforts to block the resolutions will be defeated.

Taft Says Issue Confused

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) said the Senate is "reasonably close" to agreement on foreign policy.

Taft, who went to Indianapolis for a weekend speech, told a reporter the troops-for-Europe issue is so confused, however, that there can't be an accurate prediction of tomorrow's vote. Taft said there will be no filibuster against pro-administration proposals.

In a talk to a group of Indiana Republicans last night, Taft said the defense program has brought the nation "to the very limit of its economic capacity, and if we undertake to do something beyond our capacity we may destroy ourselves."

The Ives-Watkins debate, on a "Meet Your Congress" program broadcast by Washington's WINX and other stations, spotlighted Republican disagreements on the troops-for-Europe question.

Should Consult Congress

Ives said "it seems to me, very definitely, that we are at war." Hence troops should be sent to implement the North Atlantic pact, he said, although he added that President Truman "as a matter of common sense" should consult with Congress in sending them.

Mr. Truman has said he will talk it over with Congress—which has to vote the money—but he contends he has the power, under the Constitution, to send troops anywhere he thinks they are needed with or without Congress' consent.

On the same program with Ives and Watkins, Sen. Ellender (D-La) said he would vote against resolutions calling on the President to get congressional approval before sending more than the contemplated four divisions to Europe.

Reuther Blasts Wilson's Setup

CLEVELAND, April 1 (AP)—Walter Reuther, blasting the nation's mobilization setup, said today it would be a "disservice to the war effort" for labor to give a no-strike pledge now.

He opened his CIO United Auto Workers convention with a vow that the government is "not going to get away with a ten per cent wage freeze in this period of profiteering and inflation."

Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, the UAW's second ranking officer, openly demanded that President Truman discharge Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson.

Reuther's keynote speech was perhaps the most bitter of his many denunciations of the mobilization program. He made it unmistakably plain that he was rapidly losing patience with the Truman administration.

The UAW president proposed that representatives of all labor organizations huddle in advance of next year's national political conventions to "look at the score."

Legislators Say Inflation Costs U. S. Many Planes

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The Senate-House Economic Committee declared tonight that "galloping inflation" has "knocked out of the sky a large fraction of the airplanes our taxes might otherwise have bought."

The committee, in its annual report, said it is imperative that Congress put a more effective wage-price control law on the books speedily—with special study of farm and food prices.

If inflation isn't halted, the committee said, the way will be open for "the Kremlin to destroy the economic basis of this government and thereby the hope of a free world."

Escalator Pacts Assailed

A majority of the committee sharply assailed as part of an "engine of inflation" wage contracts which provide for automatic pay increases when the cost of living rises.

Those so-called escalator wage provisions—in effect in the automobile and some other industries—serve to "push up prices," the report declared. It added that the situation challenges Congress to find a legislative remedy.

Differing with the majority, Sens. Douglas (D-Ill), Benton (D-Conn) and Rep. Hart (D-NJ) said the escalator wage hikes result from price increases—and don't in any way cause them.

The committee, said the Jan. 26 wage-price freeze applied the brakes to inflation, but that it has not halted. Stabilization officials have promised price rollbacks, the group noted, "but adjustments to date have been on the upward side."

Time For "Positive Action"

"The time has arrived," the committee added, "for positive action to stabilize and — without government subsidies — to reduce the cost of living."

In a lone dissent on the subsidy side, Sen. Benton urged some federal payments to producers and processors to hold down retail prices —of food, for example.

The report called for rigid economy in federal spending. The committee turned thumbs down on some of the non-military projects which President Truman recommended in his economic report to Congress Jan. 12. The congressional document also urged a general cut in dollar-aid grants to the states.

Modern Weapons Lacking As Spain Displays Strength

MADRID, Spain, April 1 (AP) — Generalissimo Franco, beset by economic worries, paraded his best troops in a colorful military show today in the 12th celebration of his civil war victory.

But the troops displayed a sorry lack of modern weapons that would make Spain an asset to the West in any conflict with Communism. The most modern equipment was 100 World War II surplus jeeps. The tanks, artillery, machine guns, rifles and the planes which flew overhead were all pre-World War II models. There were no bazookas, no fast, rapid-firing tanks, no radar equipment, no jet planes.

Franco hopes to get such modern equipment from the United States. But it is not possible to confirm here the Washington reports that he has proposed an alliance with either the United States or with the United States and Portugal in order to get it.

These reports, which some sources here call a "State Department trial balloon," already have caused ill feeling and worry in French, British and other North Atlantic diplomatic circles here. The French and British are particularly dissatisfied. They say they were unable to obtain more than generalities from U. S. Ambassador Stanton Griffis about his long talk with Franco on March 14.

Wilson Sees Safer America, High-Level Economy By 1953

Nation Must Not Slacken Determination, Defense Mobilizer Declares In Report

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson reported to President Truman tonight that two years from now America should be strong enough to give us "reasonable safety against aggression" and a high-level civilian economy, too.

But in those two years, he said, we have to keep up "the fullest degree of drive and unity" and overcome the "tendency to let our enthusiasm ebb and flow."

Wilson submitted his first quarterly report as top man of the mobilization program. It was a combination of:

1. A description of accomplishments since the Korean outbreak. "Already," said Wilson, "we have made America measurably safer." U. S. armed forces have doubled in size to about 3,000,000 men. Military orders are being placed at a rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 a week.

Inflation Tough Problem

2. Plain words about the grimmer aspects of the next two years. Fighting inflation will be a tougher problem than getting production, and if we fail, inflation can "sap the strength of the economy." Military production will cause shortages of civilian goods and dislocations of manpower.

Wilson said that if we stick to our long-term decisions and don't slacken our determination, then some time in 1953:

1. Our readiness to enter upon total mobilization (if need be) should be "sufficient."

2. Production of civilian goods should be at least as great as the pre-Korean level.

3. The coming shortages of metal goods may begin to ease and "we can probably begin to talk about taking off controls."

15% Production Hike Needed

"In all this effort," he said in bold-face type, "we have no other purpose than to restore and preserve the peace."

Concerning America's total production of goods and services, Wilson said it rose 10 per cent in 1950 to an annual rate of $300,000,000,000, and in order to meet both defense and civilian needs, "we should attain a further increase of something like 15 per cent in the next three years, adding $45,000,000,000 to the total national output."

Concerning military production, Wilson said the Defense Department has placed $23,000,000,000 worth of orders for equipment since last July, more than half of it in the last three months.

Actual defense spending — as distinguished from the placing of orders — is running at the rate of about $2,000,000,000 a month, approximately double the rate at the time of the Korean attack.

Hearing On Ship Deal Promised

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Senators moved on many fronts tonight to launch within a week a broad investigation of fabulous profits on war surplus ships deals.

They promised a public hearing on these questions:

1. Whether political influence helped former Rep. Joseph E. Casey (D-Mass) build a $100,000 investment in tankers into a $2,800,000 profit for himself and his friends.

2. Whether the deal — with the knowledge of the Treasury Department and U. S. Maritime Commission — involved tax benefits not available to the average income taxpayer. The Senate Finance Committee, not in the affair up to now, was reported to have an eye on that phase.

3. How all or some of the ships bought by Casey finally wound up in the hands of a tax-free charitable organization headed by Nebold Morris, unsuccessful Republican candidate for mayor of New York in 1949.

4. Whether an alleged government "influence ring," with White House contacts, was involved in any way.

Kefauver Doesn't Aspire To White House

WASHINGTON, April 1. (AP)—Kefauver for president?

Ridiculous," the Senator himself said today.

The chairman of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee was asked point-blank on an NBC television program today if he has presidential ambitions.

"Nobody ever thought of me for president and certainly I never thought about it myself," the Tennessee Democrat replied. "I just want to be a United States senator if I can, and if I can't be that I want to go back to Tennessee and be a country squire."

Decorah, Ia., Hotel Blaze Kills Three

75 Other Guests Are Routed From Building

DECORAH, Ia., April 1 (AP) — Three persons were burned to death when a mushrooming fire swept through the three-story, 50-room Commercial Hotel here today.

Two of the victims were identified as Theodore Barlow, 70, and Gene Smith, 80, both permanent guests of the 80-year-old residential hotel. They were trapped when flames roared through the structure.

The third victim, also a hotel guest, was identified as Jim McGovern, 70.

About 75 other guests, most of them elderly, were routed from the hotel after fire of unknown origin broke out in the vicinity of the kitchen at about 9:30 a. m.

Most of the hotel guests resided there permanently and all of them lost most of their possessions. Some patrons were still asleep when the fire started. Hotel employes awakened them.

The flames spread from the rear to the front of the brick, wood and sheet metal structure within about 20 minutes. The fire worked its way to the roof and flames leaped high in the air, fanned by a strong north wind.

Decorah's volunteer firemen, many of whom were called from church, saved two adjoining buildings—a music store and a tavern.

It was mid-afternoon before firemen could get into the smoking ruins to recover the bodies. Search for any other possible victims continued but a hotel spokesman said he believed all remaining guests were accounted for.

Ala. Farmlands Flooded; 2 Dead

[By The Associated Press]

Floodwaters of three major southern rivers rolled over Southern Alabama farmlands Sunday, causing widespread havoc and at least two deaths.

Elsewhere in the flood-plagued deep south, Iowa and New Jersey, overflows had reached their crests or were receding.

This was true along the Tombigee, Warrior and Coosa Rivers in Northeastern Mississippi, Northwest Georgia and Northern Alabama, in Iowa and New Jersey.

April showers turned to light snow in the north central states.

A Mobile forecaster said spreading torrents may cause serious crop damage in Alabama's rich agricultural area. Upstream damage to homes, roads and businesses was estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

More rain was due in Alabama and Mississippi Monday.

Ex - GI Weds Girl He Found On Beachhead

George Fortin, former GI from New Bedford, Mass., slips a wedding band on the finger of Anna Farano, 17, in a church in Passiano, Italy, as Canon Bartolomeo D'Elia performs the marriage ceremony. Fortin, landing at Salerno in 1943, found Anna, then a frightened little girl, on the beachhead. On returning to the U. S., he promised her he would come back for her.

Cotton-Rayon Workers Begin Southern Strike

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 1 (AP) — Southern textile workers struck today. The action was largely technical since most mills are closed on Sundays. The real test comes tomorrow morning.

Some 90,000 cotton-rayon workers are under contract in the South, but it was not clear just how many would be called out on strike for higher wages.

Pickets appeared at some places, however, and turned back the small maintenance crews which work on Sundays. In other places maintenance crews worked as usual pending action at union mass meetings scheduled during the day.

Rieve Goes South

President Emil Rieve of the CIO-Textile workers left Washington for Greensboro, N. C., to set up strike headquarters. A union spokesman at Greensboro said he knew of no negotiations for a settlement being conducted today.

Most union contracts, previously extended at the request of the Defense Department following a contract settlement in northern mills two weeks ago, expired at midnight last night. Many mills are producing war materials.

Mediators Give Up

Government mediators, who worked with various labor-management groups all last week, gave up in failure yesterday. A three-hour labor-management meeting last night at Dan River Mills, Danville, Va., broke up without agreement. Dan River in the past has frequently been the pattern setter on southern wage agreements.

Rieve said in Washington yesterday that at least 40,000 workers in six southern states would strike at 40 mills.

Logjam Of Legislation Will Face Assembly On Final Day Of Session

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — A logjam of legislation—much of it dealing with matters of top importance—will face General Assembly members tomorrow when they convene for the last day of the 1951 session.

One dispute, in particular, had to be settled before the legislators could even think of packing up.

That was the double-barreled battle over the supplement to Gov. McKeldin's $163,000,000 budget for fiscal 1952.

Practically all of the supplement consists of pay raises averaging $225 for the state's 14,000 employes. Every cent of it depends on agreement between the executive and Legislature on how to finance the state police department, a $1,768,600 item in the overall budget.

It was primarily a bookkeeping problem, but the Governor based the pay raises on making money otherwise tied up by the state police available in general funds. He wants to switch the state police expense to highway funds.

Senate Democrats insist that would be all right for only one year, and then with exceptions. They amended the administration's police-shift bill to take $1,000,000 saved from other departments and any excess in revenues to replace money diverted to the police from road maintenance in Baltimore and the counties.

Three other questions that could force the legislators to "turn back the clock" and continue in session past the midnight deadline tomorrow included:

1—Whether to enact legislation to give schoolteachers a $300 across-the-board pay raise and finance it by raising the corporation income tax from four to five per cent.

2—What is becoming the peren-

McKeldin Warns 'Vetoes Will Fly'

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) —Gov. McKeldin tonight warned the General Assembly he plans unrestricted use of the executive veto on all legislation he considers doubtful or unwise.

"I am a one-term governor," McKeldin said, "and so the vetoes will fly."

Women Will Run Canonsburg, Pa.

CANONSBURG, Pa., April 1 (AP)— The women are going to do in this Western Pennsylvania town what some of the men say they have been doing right along—that is, run the place.

Members of the Women of the Moose organization will fill all posts in the town government for one day to spur interest in civic affairs.

Regular officials, like the burgess and police chief, will be around—just in case they're needed.

Five Meet Death In Car Collision

MUNCIE, Ind., April 1 (AP)—A head-on automobile collision killed five persons, including two small children and their parents, and injured two others shortly before dawn today on a highway near Muncie.

Coroner Eugene Eissman said he had evidence that the driver of one car was racing at high speed, had been drinking at a tavern at 4:45 a. m. and betting he could drink more beer and drive faster than anyone.

The coroner said he will submit his evidence to the grand jury. He told newsmen the accident was "a direct result" of failure "to clean up after-hour joints" — or taverns which sell liquor outside licensed hours. Indiana law requires taverns to close at midnight.

The coroner said the boastful driver was Claude E. Selvey—one of those killed. Selvey, 29, Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., had been visiting his twin brother, John, 29, a Muncie factory worker.

The four other persons killed were Charles Acker, 29, New Castle, Ind.; his wife, Helen, 29, and two of their children, Charles Edward, 7, and Constance Ann, 4.

Ralph Forbes, Veteran Actor, Dies At 45

NEW YORK, April 1. (AP)—Ralph Forbes, 45, stage and screen actor for more than a quarter of a century, died last night in Montefiore Hospital, the Bronx, after an illness of several weeks.

He recently had undergone an operation, the nature of which was not disclosed.

A one-time matinee idol on Broadway, the London-born Forbes formerly was married to Actress Ruth Chatterton and Heather Angel. His third wife, Dora Sayers, also an actress, survives.

Forbes began his acting career in British silent pictures. He shifted to the stage and came to this country in 1924. Since then he had appeared in more than 80 roles on Broadway and in Hollywood.

Miners Denounce West Va. Governor

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — Gov. Patteson was bitterly denounced at miners' day celebrations in West Virginia Sunday for signing the "fire boss" mine safety bill into law.

Some 250 members of United Mineworkers District 29 adopted at Oak Hill a resolution which called the Governor a "conniving and faithless politician."

2,300 Enemy Vehicles Seen By U. N. Fliers

U. S. Tanks Pour Shells Across 38th

TOKYO, Monday, April 2 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur warned today of an ominous buildup by Chinese Reds in Central Korea just north of the 38th parallel.

Underscoring his warning, Allied fliers last night counted 2,300 enemy vehicles on North Korean roads. It was the biggest single night's movement of the Korean war by the Reds. More than 1,000 of the vehicles were brought under air attack.

Another attempt to burst through the United Nations lines with a "human wave" counteroffensive is expected.

Across Korea there was little ground action. An American tank force, firing on the run, poured shells at Reds across the 38th parallel in the area where the big Red drive may be launched.

The tanks blasted ridge positions on the north edge of the Chunchon valley but did not cross the controversial political boundary as they had done at two points Saturday.

Line North Of 38th In East

The United Nations line is virtually at the parallel all across Korea and north of it in the east.

Gen. MacArthur's communique today said the Reds had stepped up movements of men and weapons in March—most of these sent to the "Chorwon - Kumhwa - Hwachon triangle."

Hwachon is the point from which a Red thrust by waves of Chinese may be hurled down the center of the peninsula. It is seven miles north of the 38th parallel in Central Korea.

Kumhwa is 18 miles northwest of Hwachon and 20 miles above the parallel. Chorwon is 14 miles southwest of Kumhwa and 17 above the parallel.

On the far east coast, Republic of Korea patrols pushed from 10 to 12 miles north of the parallel. They had fire support from the U. S. heavy cruiser St. Paul, which blasted Red positions north of Yangyang with powerful 8-inch guns. The ROKs also captured a hill position five miles to the west.

Other Ships Blast Bridges

Other naval units, including the U. S. destroyers Massey and Wallace L. Lind and the British frigate Alacrity, bombarded bridges and road junctions around Songjin, 140 miles north of Wonsan on the east coast.

Fifteen miles inland from the east coast, another South Korean patrol was on the 38th parallel.

United Nations forces were back in virtually the same positions along the 38th parallel they had abandoned just three months ago.

In one case, South Korean infantry crouched in the same foxholes south of the Imjin River they had occupied when the Chinese and North Korean Reds launched a massive New Year's offensive.

Kefauver Names Race Wire Chain Top Public Enemy

WASHINGTON, April 1. (AP) — Chairman Kefauver (D-Tenn) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee today named the Continental Press, a racing wire syndicate, as "public enemy No. 1."

Kefauver said legislation to put Continental out of business will be the committee's most important recommendation.

The committee, now drafting its reports after 11 months of public hearings that captured national attention, has heard testimony linking many Chicago and other gangsters with the operations of Continental, which has been described as supplying race information to thousands of bookmakers.

Interviewed on NBC's Meet The Press" television program, Kefauver said also that, knowing what he knows, he wouldn't vote in the Senate for confirmation of New York's former mayor, William O'Dwyer, as ambassador to Mexico.

A firemen's organization official has testified he gave O'Dwyer $10,000 during the political campaign of 1949. O'Dwyer flatly denies it. A murder investigation made by O'Dwyer as district attorney of Brooklyn 11 years ago also is under grand jury scrutiny.

Kefauver said he personally doesn't think Charles (Lucky) Luciano produced enough information in World War Two to justify his being pardoned by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Luciano, reputed former czar of the underworld in New York, was serving a 30 to 50 year sentence for compulsory prostitution, when he was released from prison in January, 1946. Gov. Dewey, who had obtained Luciano's conviction in 1936, commuted his sentence on condition that Luciano leave the country and not attempt to reenter.

Before going on television, Kefauver told a reporter he is studying the possibility of a dual curb on crime by citizens commission and a watchdog Senate committee.

The Senator said he doesn't believe the present committee should "go on being a policeman."

Halley In Hospital

NEW YORK, April 1 (AP) — Rudolph Halley, chief counsel of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, is in Roosevelt Hospital for an operation.

Hurley, Attacked, Resting In Hospital

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley was resting at Walter Reed Hospital today after being beaten by a thug outside his home.

A hospital spokesman said the 68-year-old Hurley was under observation. There was no word on when the former secretary of war would be released.

Hurley was attacked as he entered his Massachusetts Avenue home last night. He suffered head cuts and bruises. Attendants at George Washington University Hospital, where he was taken first, said his condition did not appear serious.

Actor Has Operation

SUFFERN, N. Y., April 1 (AP) — Actor Burgess Meredith underwent an emergency operation for acute appendicitis at Good Samaritan Hospital here today.

Invalid, His Wife And Sister Slain By 16-Year-Old Nephew

DOVER, N. J., April 1. (AP)—A man, his wife and sister were shot to death in their home and Delaware state police said their 16-year-old nephew confessed today to the triple killing.

William A. Nickle, one of 10 children and with a record of juvenile delinquency, was arrested in Pearson's Corner, Del., where he fled after the shootings about midnight last night.

The dead were Charles Brown, 49, a bedridden invalid, his wife, Mary, 42, a registered nurse and telephone operator, and Brown's sister, Mrs. Myrtle Brown, who had come from her home in Shelbiana, Ky., to help out.

Police at first were baffled for a motive in the killings, but finally Morris County Prosecutor John D. Collins and Dover Police Chief John J. Valley pieced together this theory:

Young Nickle, who had been living with his uncle and aunt for about two years, often had taken their car without permission.

He was reprimanded for this and brooded about it. He bought a .22 calibre rifle from a boyfriend several days ago, telling him he wanted it to shoot squirrels.

15% Production Hike Needed

"In all this effort," he said in bold-face type, "we have no other purpose than to restore and preserve the peace."

Concerning America's total production of goods and services, Wilson said it rose 10 per cent in 1950 to an annual rate of $300,000,000,000, and in order to meet both defense and civilian needs, "we should attain a further increase of something like 15 per cent in the next three years, adding $45,000,000,000 to the total national output."

Concerning military production, Wilson said the Defense Department has placed $23,000,000,000 worth of orders for equipment since last July, more than half of it in the last three months.

Actual defense spending — as distinguished from the placing of orders — is running at the rate of about $2,000,000,000 a month, approximately double the rate at the time of the Korean attack.

Hearing On Ship Deal Promised

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Senators moved on many fronts tonight to launch within a week a broad investigation of fabulous profits on war surplus ships deals.

They promised a public hearing on these questions:

1. Whether political influence helped former Rep. Joseph E. Casey (D-Mass) build a $100,000 investment in tankers into a $2,800,000 profit for himself and his friends.

2. Whether the deal — with the knowledge of the Treasury Department and U. S. Maritime Commission — involved tax benefits not available to the average income taxpayer. The Senate Finance Committee, not in the affair up to now, was reported to have an eye on that phase.

3. How all or some of the ships bought by Casey finally wound up in the hands of a tax-free charitable organization headed by Nebold Morris, unsuccessful Republican candidate for mayor of New York in 1949.

4. Whether an alleged government "influence ring," with White House contacts, was involved in any way.

Kefauver Doesn't Aspire To White House

WASHINGTON, April 1. (AP)—Kefauver for president?

Ridiculous," the Senator himself said today.

The chairman of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee was asked point-blank on an NBC television program today if he has presidential ambitions.

"Nobody ever thought of me for president and certainly I never thought about it myself," the Tennessee Democrat replied. "I just want to be a United States senator if I can, and if I can't be that I want to go back to Tennessee and be a country squire."

Decorah, Ia., Hotel Blaze Kills Three

75 Other Guests Are Routed From Building

DECORAH, Ia., April 1 (AP) — Three persons were burned to death when a mushrooming fire swept through the three-story, 50-room Commercial Hotel here today.

Two of the victims were identified as Theodore Barlow, 70, and Gene Smith, 80, both permanent guests of the 80-year-old residential hotel. They were trapped when flames roared through the structure.

The third victim, also a hotel guest, was identified as Jim McGovern, 70.

About 75 other guests, most of them elderly, were routed from the hotel after fire of unknown origin broke out in the vicinity of the kitchen at about 9:30 a. m.

Most of the hotel guests resided there permanently and all of them lost most of their possessions. Some patrons were still asleep when the fire started. Hotel employes awakened them.

The flames spread from the rear to the front of the brick, wood and sheet metal structure within about 20 minutes. The fire worked its way to the roof and flames leaped high in the air, fanned by a strong north wind.

Decorah's volunteer firemen, many of whom were called from church, saved two adjoining buildings—a music store and a tavern.

It was mid-afternoon before firemen could get into the smoking ruins to recover the bodies. Search for any other possible victims continued but a hotel spokesman said he believed all remaining guests were accounted for.

Ala. Farmlands Flooded; 2 Dead

[By The Associated Press]

Floodwaters of three major southern rivers rolled over Southern Alabama farmlands Sunday, causing widespread havoc and at least two deaths.

Elsewhere in the flood-plagued deep south, Iowa and New Jersey, overflows had reached their crests or were receding.

This was true along the Tombigee, Warrior and Coosa Rivers in Northeastern Mississippi, Northwest Georgia and Northern Alabama, in Iowa and New Jersey.

April showers turned to light snow in the north central states.

A Mobile forecaster said spreading torrents may cause serious crop damage in Alabama's rich agricultural area. Upstream damage to homes, roads and businesses was estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

More rain was due in Alabama and Mississippi Monday.

Fortin, landing at Salerno in 1943, found Anna, then a frightened little girl, on the beachhead. On returning to the U. S., he promised her he would come back for her.

Cotton-Rayon Workers Begin Southern Strike

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 1 (AP) — Southern textile workers struck today. The action was largely technical since most mills are closed on Sundays. The real test comes tomorrow morning.

Some 90,000 cotton-rayon workers are under contract in the South, but it was not clear just how many would be called out on strike for higher wages.

Pickets appeared at some places, however, and turned back the small maintenance crews which work on Sundays. In other places maintenance crews worked as usual pending action at union mass meetings scheduled during the day.

Rieve Goes South

President Emil Rieve of the CIO-Textile workers left Washington for Greensboro, N. C., to set up strike headquarters. A union spokesman at Greensboro said he knew of no negotiations for a settlement being conducted today.

Most union contracts, previously extended at the request of the Defense Department following a contract settlement in northern mills two weeks ago, expired at midnight last night. Many mills are producing war materials.

Mediators Give Up

Government mediators, who worked with various labor-management groups all last week, gave up in failure yesterday. A three-hour labor-management meeting last night at Dan River Mills, Danville, Va., broke up without agreement. Dan River in the past has frequently been the pattern setter on southern wage agreements.

Rieve said in Washington yesterday that at least 40,000 workers in six southern states would strike at 40 mills.

Logjam Of Legislation Will Face Assembly On Final Day Of Session

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — A logjam of legislation—much of it dealing with matters of top importance—will face General Assembly members tomorrow when they convene for the last day of the 1951 session.

One dispute, in particular, had to be settled before the legislators could even think of packing up.

That was the double-barreled battle over the supplement to Gov. McKeldin's $163,000,000 budget for fiscal 1952.

Practically all of the supplement consists of pay raises averaging $225 for the state's 14,000 employes. Every cent of it depends on agreement between the executive and Legislature on how to finance the state police department, a $1,768,600 item in the overall budget.

It was primarily a bookkeeping problem, but the Governor based the pay raises on making money otherwise tied up by the state police available in general funds. He wants to switch the state police expense to highway funds.

Senate Democrats insist that would be all right for only one year, and then with exceptions. They amended the administration's police-shift bill to take $1,000,000 saved from other departments and any excess in revenues to replace money diverted to the police from road maintenance in Baltimore and the counties.

Three other questions that could force the legislators to "turn back the clock" and continue in session past the midnight deadline tomorrow included:

1—Whether to enact legislation to give schoolteachers a $300 across-the-board pay raise and finance it by raising the corporation income tax from four to five per cent.

2—What is becoming the peren-

McKeldin Warns 'Vetoes Will Fly'

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) —Gov. McKeldin tonight warned the General Assembly he plans unrestricted use of the executive veto on all legislation he considers doubtful or unwise.

"I am a one-term governor," McKeldin said, "and so the vetoes will fly."

Women Will Run Canonsburg, Pa.

CANONSBURG, Pa., April 1 (AP)— The women are going to do in this Western Pennsylvania town what some of the men say they have been doing right along—that is, run the place.

Members of the Women of the Moose organization will fill all posts in the town government for one day to spur interest in civic affairs.

Regular officials, like the burgess and police chief, will be around—just in case they're needed.

Five Meet Death In Car Collision

MUNCIE, Ind., April 1 (AP)—A head-on automobile collision killed five persons, including two small children and their parents, and injured two others shortly before dawn today on a highway near Muncie.

Coroner Eugene Eissman said he had evidence that the driver of one car was racing at high speed, had been drinking at a tavern at 4:45 a. m. and betting he could drink more beer and drive faster than anyone.

The coroner said he will submit his evidence to the grand jury. He told newsmen the accident was "a direct result" of failure "to clean up after-hour joints" — or taverns which sell liquor outside licensed hours. Indiana law requires taverns to close at midnight.

The coroner said the boastful driver was Claude E. Selvey—one of those killed. Selvey, 29, Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., had been visiting his twin brother, John, 29, a Muncie factory worker.

The four other persons killed were Charles Acker, 29, New Castle, Ind.; his wife, Helen, 29, and two of their children, Charles Edward, 7, and Constance Ann, 4.

Ralph Forbes, Veteran Actor, Dies At 45

NEW YORK, April 1. (AP)—Ralph Forbes, 45, stage and screen actor for more than a quarter of a century, died last night in Montefiore Hospital, the Bronx, after an illness of several weeks.

He recently had undergone an operation, the nature of which was not disclosed.

A one-time matinee idol on Broadway, the London-born Forbes formerly was married to Actress Ruth Chatterton and Heather Angel. His third wife, Dora Sayers, also an actress, survives.

Forbes began his acting career in British silent pictures. He shifted to the stage and came to this country in 1924. Since then he had appeared in more than 80 roles on Broadway and in Hollywood.

Miners Denounce West Va. Governor

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — Gov. Patteson was bitterly denounced at miners' day celebrations in West Virginia Sunday for signing the "fire boss" mine safety bill into law.

Some 250 members of United Mineworkers District 29 adopted at Oak Hill a resolution which called the Governor a "conniving and faithless politician."

Kefauver Names Race Wire Chain Top Public Enemy

WASHINGTON, April 1. (AP) — Chairman Kefauver (D-Tenn) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee today named the Continental Press, a racing wire syndicate, as "public enemy No. 1."

Kefauver said legislation to put Continental out of business will be the committee's most important recommendation.

The committee, now drafting its reports after 11 months of public hearings that captured national attention, has heard testimony linking many Chicago and other gangsters with the operations of Continental, which has been described as supplying race information to thousands of bookmakers.

Interviewed on NBC's Meet The Press" television program, Kefauver said also that, knowing what he knows, he wouldn't vote in the Senate for confirmation of New York's former mayor, William O'Dwyer, as ambassador to Mexico.

A firemen's organization official has testified he gave O'Dwyer $10,000 during the political campaign of 1949. O'Dwyer flatly denies it. A murder investigation made by O'Dwyer as district attorney of Brooklyn 11 years ago also is under grand jury scrutiny.

Kefauver said he personally doesn't think Charles (Lucky) Luciano produced enough information in World War Two to justify his being pardoned by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Luciano, reputed former czar of the underworld in New York, was serving a 30 to 50 year sentence for compulsory prostitution, when he was released from prison in January, 1946. Gov. Dewey, who had obtained Luciano's conviction in 1936, commuted his sentence on condition that Luciano leave the country and not attempt to reenter.

Before going on television, Kefauver told a reporter he is studying the possibility of a dual curb on crime by citizens commission and a watchdog Senate committee.

The Senator said he doesn't believe the present committee should "go on being a policeman."

2,300 Enemy Vehicles Seen By U. N. Fliers

U. S. Tanks Pour Shells Across 38th

TOKYO, Monday, April 2 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur warned today of an ominous buildup by Chinese Reds in Central Korea just north of the 38th parallel.

Underscoring his warning, Allied fliers last night counted 2,300 enemy vehicles on North Korean roads. It was the biggest single night's movement of the Korean war by the Reds. More than 1,000 of the vehicles were brought under air attack.

Another attempt to burst through the United Nations lines with a "human wave" counteroffensive is expected.

Across Korea there was little ground action. An American tank force, firing on the run, poured shells at Reds across the 38th parallel in the area where the big Red drive may be launched.

The tanks blasted ridge positions on the north edge of the Chunchon valley but did not cross the controversial political boundary as they had done at two points Saturday.

Line North Of 38th In East

The United Nations line is virtually at the parallel all across Korea and north of it in the east.

Gen. MacArthur's communique today said the Reds had stepped up movements of men and weapons in March—most of these sent to the "Chorwon - Kumhwa - Hwachon triangle."

Hwachon is the point from which a Red thrust by waves of Chinese may be hurled down the center of the peninsula. It is seven miles north of the 38th parallel in Central Korea.

Kumhwa is 18 miles northwest of Hwachon and 20 miles above the parallel. Chorwon is 14 miles southwest of Kumhwa and 17 above the parallel.

On the far east coast, Republic of Korea patrols pushed from 10 to 12 miles north of the parallel. They had fire support from the U. S. heavy cruiser St. Paul, which blasted Red positions north of Yangyang with powerful 8-inch guns. The ROKs also captured a hill position five miles to the west.

Other Ships Blast Bridges

Other naval units, including the U. S. destroyers Massey and Wallace L. Lind and the British frigate Alacrity, bombarded bridges and road junctions around Songjin, 140 miles north of Wonsan on the east coast.

Fifteen miles inland from the east coast, another South Korean patrol was on the 38th parallel.

United Nations forces were back in virtually the same positions along the 38th parallel they had abandoned just three months ago.

In one case, South Korean infantry crouched in the same foxholes south of the Imjin River they had occupied when the Chinese and North Korean Reds launched a massive New Year's offensive.

Hurley, Attacked, Resting In Hospital

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley was resting at Walter Reed Hospital today after being beaten by a thug outside his home.

A hospital spokesman said the 68-year-old Hurley was under observation. There was no word on when the former secretary of war would be released.

Hurley was attacked as he entered his Massachusetts Avenue home last night. He suffered head cuts and bruises. Attendants at George Washington University Hospital, where he was taken first, said his condition did not appear serious.

Modern Weapons Lacking As Spain Displays Strength

MADRID, Spain, April 1 (AP) — Generalissimo Franco, beset by economic worries, paraded his best troops in a colorful military show today in the 12th celebration of his civil war victory.

But the troops displayed a sorry lack of modern weapons that would make Spain an asset to the West in any conflict with Communism. The most modern equipment was 100 World War II surplus jeeps. The tanks, artillery, machine guns, rifles and the planes which flew overhead were all pre-World War II models. There were no bazookas, no fast, rapid-firing tanks, no radar equipment, no jet planes.

Franco hopes to get such modern equipment from the United States. But it is not possible to confirm here the Washington reports that he has proposed an alliance with either the United States or with the United States and Portugal in order to get it.

These reports, which some sources here call a "State Department trial balloon," already have caused ill feeling and worry in French, British and other North Atlantic diplomatic circles here. The French and British are particularly dissatisfied. They say they were unable to obtain more than generalities from U. S. Ambassador Stanton Griffis about his long talk with Franco on March 14.

Invalid, His Wife And Sister Slain By 16-Year-Old Nephew

DOVER, N. J., April 1. (AP)—A man, his wife and sister were shot to death in their home and Delaware state police said their 16-year-old nephew confessed today to the triple killing.

William A. Nickle, one of 10 children and with a record of juvenile delinquency, was arrested in Pearson's Corner, Del., where he fled after the shootings about midnight last night.

The dead were Charles Brown, 49, a bedridden invalid, his wife, Mary, 42, a registered nurse and telephone operator, and Brown's sister, Mrs. Myrtle Brown, who had come from her home in Shelbiana, Ky., to help out.

Police at first were baffled for a motive in the killings, but finally Morris County Prosecutor John D. Collins and Dover Police Chief John J. Valley pieced together this theory:

Young Nickle, who had been living with his uncle and aunt for about two years, often had taken their car without permission.

He was reprimanded for this and brooded about it. He bought a .22 calibre rifle from a boyfriend several days ago, telling him he wanted it to shoot squirrels.

M'ARTHUR WARNS OF RED BUILDUP

Senate Begins Troops Issue Voting Today

Divided On Whether U. S., USSR At War

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The "Great Debate" over sending more troops to Europe came right up to the voting stage tonight with senators split on the question of whether war with Russia already is under way.

Sen. Ives (R-NY) said it is, "very definitely." But Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) contended that unless war is declared by Congress, President Truman has no right to commit more troops to Europe's defense.

Tomorrow the talking stops and the voting begins. The Senate is ready to vote on resolutions approving the addition of four U. S. divisions to the new combined West European defense force. Democratic leaders say it's certain that Republican efforts to block the resolutions will be defeated.

Taft Says Issue Confused

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) said the Senate is "reasonably close" to agreement on foreign policy.

Taft, who went to Indianapolis for a weekend speech, told a reporter the troops-for-Europe issue is so confused, however, that there can't be an accurate prediction of tomorrow's vote. Taft said there will be no filibuster against pro-administration proposals.

In a talk to a group of Indiana Republicans last night, Taft said the defense program has brought the nation "to the very limit of its economic capacity, and if we undertake to do something beyond our capacity we may destroy ourselves."

The Ives-Watkins debate, on a "Meet Your Congress" program broadcast by Washington's WINX and other stations, spotlighted Republican disagreements on the troops-for-Europe question.

Should Consult Congress

Ives said "it seems to me, very definitely, that we are at war." Hence troops should be sent to implement the North Atlantic pact, he said, although he added that President Truman "as a matter of common sense" should consult with Congress in sending them.

Mr. Truman has said he will talk it over with Congress—which has to vote the money—but he contends he has the power, under the Constitution, to send troops anywhere he thinks they are needed with or without Congress' consent.

On the same program with Ives and Watkins, Sen. Ellender (D-La) said he would vote against resolutions calling on the President to get congressional approval before sending more than the contemplated four divisions to Europe.

Reuther Blasts Wilson's Setup

CLEVELAND, April 1 (AP)—Walter Reuther, blasting the nation's mobilization setup, said today it would be a "disservice to the war effort" for labor to give a no-strike pledge now.

He opened his CIO United Auto Workers convention with a vow that the government is "not going to get away with a ten per cent wage freeze in this period of profiteering and inflation."

Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, the UAW's second ranking officer, openly demanded that President Truman discharge Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson.

Reuther's keynote speech was perhaps the most bitter of his many denunciations of the mobilization program. He made it unmistakably plain that he was rapidly losing patience with the Truman administration.

The UAW president proposed that representatives of all labor organizations huddle in advance of next year's national political conventions to "look at the score."

BITTER TEARS — Clarence J. Trask, father of Mrs. Doris Cook who with her husband was slain on a lonely road, breaks down and weeps at funeral services in Perris, Calif., for the young couple. Their eight-month-old baby was found playing on a blanket beside his father's body.

Legislators Say Inflation Costs U. S. Many Planes

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The Senate-House Economic Committee declared tonight that "galloping inflation" has "knocked out of the sky a large fraction of the airplanes our taxes might otherwise have bought."

The committee, in its annual report, said it is imperative that Congress put a more effective wage-price control law on the books speedily—with special study of farm and food prices.

If inflation isn't halted, the committee said, the way will be open for "the Kremlin to destroy the economic basis of this government and thereby the hope of a free world."

Escalator Pacts Assailed

A majority of the committee sharply assailed as part of an "engine of inflation" wage contracts which provide for automatic pay increases when the cost of living rises.

Those so-called escalator wage provisions—in effect in the automobile and some other industries—serve to "push up prices," the report declared. It added that the situation challenges Congress to find a legislative remedy.

Differing with the majority, Sens. Douglas (D-Ill), Benton (D-Conn) and Rep. Hart (D-NJ) said the escalator wage hikes result from price increases—and don't in any way cause them.

The committee said the Jan. 26 wage-price freeze applied the brakes to inflation, but that it has not halted. Stabilization officials have promised price rollbacks, the group noted, "but adjustments to date have been on the upward side."

Time For "Positive Action"

"The time has arrived," the committee added, "for positive action to stabilize and—without government subsidies — to reduce the cost of living."

In a lone dissent on the subsidy side, Sen. Benton urged some federal payments to producers and processors to hold down retail prices—of food, for example.

The report called for rigid economy in federal spending. The committee turned thumbs down on some of the non-military projects which President Truman recommended in his economic report to Congress Jan. 12. The congressional document also urged a general cut in dollar-aid grants to the states.

Wilson Sees Safer America, High-Level Economy By 1953

Nation Must Not Slacken Determination, Defense Mobilizer Declares In Report

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson reported to President Truman tonight that two years from now America should be strong enough to give us "reasonable safety against aggression" and a high-level civilian economy, too.

But in those two years, he said, we have to keep up "the fullest degree of drive and unity" and overcome the "tendency to let our enthusiasm ebb and flow."

Wilson submitted his first quarterly report as top man of the mobilization program. It was a combination of:

1. A description of accomplishments since the Korean outbreak. "Already," said Wilson, "we have made America measurably safer." U. S. armed forces have doubled in size to about 3,000,000 men. Military orders are being placed at a rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 a week.

Inflation Tough Problem

2. Plain words about the grimmer aspects of the next two years. Fighting inflation will be a tougher problem than getting production, and if we fail, inflation can "sap the strength of the economy." Military production will cause shortages of civilian goods and dislocations of manpower.

Wilson said that if we stick to our long-term decisions and don't slacken our determination, then some time in 1953:

1. Our readiness to enter upon total mobilization (if need be) should be "sufficient."

2. Production of civilian goods should be at least as great as the pre-Korean level.

3. The coming shortages of metal goods may begin to ease and "we can probably begin to talk about taking off controls."

15% Production Hike Needed

"In all this effort," he said in bold-face type, "we have no other purpose than to restore and preserve the peace."

Concerning America's total production of goods and services, Wilson said it rose 10 per cent in 1950 to an annual rate of $300,000,000,000, and in order to meet both defense and civilian needs, "we should attain a further increase of something like 15 per cent in the next three years, adding $45,000,000,000 to the total national output."

Concerning military production, Wilson said the Defense Department has placed $23,000,000,000 worth of orders for equipment since last July, more than half of it in the last three months.

Actual defense spending — as distinguished from the placing of orders — is running at the rate of about $2,000,000,000 a month, approximately double the rate at the time of the Korean attack.

The coroner said the boastful driver was Claude E. Selvey—one of those killed. Selvey, 29, Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., had been visiting his twin brother, John, 29, a Muncie factory worker.

The four other persons killed were Charles Acker, 29, New Castle, Ind.; his wife, Helen, 29, and two of their children, Charles Edward, 7, and Constance Ann, 4.

Ralph Forbes, Veteran Actor, Dies At 45

NEW YORK, April 1. (AP)—Ralph Forbes, 45, stage and screen actor for more than a quarter of a century, died last night in Montefiore Hospital, the Bronx, after an illness of several weeks.

He recently had undergone an operation, the nature of which was not disclosed.

A one-time matinee idol on Broadway, the London-born Forbes formerly was married to Actress Ruth Chatterton and Heather Angel. His third wife, Dora Sayers, also an actress, survives.

Forbes began his acting career in British silent pictures. He shifted to the stage and came to this country in 1924. Since then he had appeared in more than 80 roles on Broadway and in Hollywood.

Miners Denounce West Va. Governor

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — Gov. Patteson was bitterly denounced at miners' day celebrations in West Virginia Sunday for signing the "fire boss" mine safety bill into law.

Some 250 members of United Mineworkers District 29 adopted at Oak Hill a resolution which called the Governor a "conniving and faithless politician."

Kefauver Names Race Wire Chain Top Public Enemy

WASHINGTON, April 1. (AP) — Chairman Kefauver (D-Tenn) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee today named the Continental Press, a racing wire syndicate, as "public enemy No. 1."

Kefauver said legislation to put Continental out of business will be the committee's most important recommendation.

The committee, now drafting its reports after 11 months of public hearings that captured national attention, has heard testimony linking many Chicago and other gangsters with the operations of Continental, which has been described as supplying race information to thousands of bookmakers.

Interviewed on NBC's Meet The Press" television program, Kefauver said also that, knowing what he knows, he wouldn't vote in the Senate for confirmation of New York's former mayor, William O'Dwyer, as ambassador to Mexico.

A firemen's organization official has testified he gave O'Dwyer $10,000 during the political campaign of 1949. O'Dwyer flatly denies it. A murder investigation made by O'Dwyer as district attorney of Brooklyn 11 years ago also is under grand jury scrutiny.

Kefauver said he personally doesn't think Charles (Lucky) Luciano produced enough information in World War Two to justify his being pardoned by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Luciano, reputed former czar of the underworld in New York, was serving a 30 to 50 year sentence for compulsory prostitution, when he was released from prison in January, 1946. Gov. Dewey, who had obtained Luciano's conviction in 1936, commuted his sentence on condition that Luciano leave the country and not attempt to reenter.

Before going on television, Kefauver told a reporter he is studying the possibility of a dual curb on crime by citizens commission and a watchdog Senate committee.

The Senator said he doesn't believe the present committee should "go on being a policeman."

2,300 Enemy Vehicles Seen By U. N. Fliers

U. S. Tanks Pour Shells Across 38th

TOKYO, Monday, April 2 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur warned today of an ominous buildup by Chinese Reds in Central Korea just north of the 38th parallel.

Underscoring his warning, Allied fliers last night counted 2,300 enemy vehicles on North Korean roads. It was the biggest single night's movement of the Korean war by the Reds. More than 1,000 of the vehicles were brought under air attack.

Another attempt to burst through the United Nations lines with a "human wave" counteroffensive is expected.

Across Korea there was little ground action. An American tank force, firing on the run, poured shells at Reds across the 38th parallel in the area where the big Red drive may be launched.

The tanks blasted ridge positions on the north edge of the Chunchon valley but did not cross the controversial political boundary as they had done at two points Saturday.

Line North Of 38th In East

The United Nations line is virtually at the parallel all across Korea and north of it in the east.

Gen. MacArthur's communique today said the Reds had stepped up movements of men and weapons in March—most of these sent to the "Chorwon - Kumhwa - Hwachon triangle."

Hwachon is the point from which a Red thrust by waves of Chinese may be hurled down the center of the peninsula. It is seven miles north of the 38th parallel in Central Korea.

Kumhwa is 18 miles northwest of Hwachon and 26 miles above the parallel. Chorwon is 14 miles southwest of Kumhwa and 17 above the parallel.

On the far east coast, Republic of Korea patrols pushed from 10 to 12 miles north of the parallel. They had fire support from the U. S. heavy cruiser St. Paul, which blasted Red positions north of Yangyang with powerful 8-inch guns. The ROKs also captured a hill position five miles to the west.

Other Ships Blast Bridges

Other naval units, including the U. S. destroyers Massey and Wallace L. Lind and the British frigate Alacrity, bombarded bridges and road junctions around Songjin, 140 miles north of Wonsan on the east coast.

Fifteen miles inland from the east coast, another South Korean patrol was on the 38th parallel.

United Nations forces were back in virtually the same positions along the 38th parallel they had abandoned just three months ago.

In one case, South Korean infantry crouched in the same foxholes south of the Imjin River they had occupied when the Chinese and North Korean Reds launched a massive New Year's offensive.

Hurley, Attacked, Resting In Hospital

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP) — Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley was resting at Walter Reed Hospital today after being beaten by a thug outside his home.

A hospital spokesman said the 68-year-old Hurley was under observation. There was no word on when the former secretary of war would be released.

Hurley was attacked as he entered his Massachusetts Avenue home last night. He suffered head cuts and bruises. Attendants at George Washington University Hospital, where he was taken first, said his condition did not appear serious.

SUFFERN, N. Y., April 1 (AP) — Actor Burgess Meredith underwent an emergency operation for acute appendicitis at Good Samaritan Hospital here today.

Logjam Of Legislation Will Face Assembly On Final Day Of Session

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — A logjam of legislation—much of it dealing with matters of top importance—will face General Assembly members tomorrow when they convene for the last day of the 1951 session.

One dispute, in particular, had to be settled before the legislators could even think of packing up.

That was the double-barreled battle over the supplement to Gov. McKeldin's $163,000,000 budget for fiscal 1952.

Practically all of the supplement consists of pay raises averaging $225 for the state's 14,000 employes. Every cent of it depends on agreement between the executive and Legislature on how to finance the state police department, a $1,768,600 item in the overall budget.

It was primarily a bookkeeping problem, but the Governor based the pay raises on making money otherwise tied up by the state police available in general funds. He wants to switch the state police expense to highway funds.

Senate Democrats insist that would be all right for only one year, and then with exceptions. They amended the administration's police-shift bill to take $1,000,000 saved from other departments and any excess in revenues to replace money diverted to the police from road maintenance in Baltimore and the counties.

Three other questions that could force the legislators to "turn back the clock" and continue in session past the midnight deadline tomorrow included:

1—Whether to enact legislation to give schoolteachers a $300 across-the-board pay raise and finance it by raising the corporation income tax from four to five per cent.

2—What is becoming the peren-

McKeldin Warns 'Vetoes Will Fly'

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) —Gov. McKeldin tonight warned the General Assembly he plans unrestricted use of the executive veto on all legislation he considers doubtful or unwise.

"I am a one-term governor," McKeldin said, "and so the vetoes will fly."

Modern Weapons Lacking As Spain Displays Strength

MADRID, Spain, April 1 (AP) — Generalissimo Franco, beset by economic worries, paraded his best troops in a colorful military show today in the 12th celebration of his civil war victory.

But the troops displayed a sorry lack of modern weapons that would make Spain an asset to the West in any conflict with Communism. The most modern equipment was 100 World War II surplus jeeps. The tanks, artillery, machine guns, rifles and the planes which flew overhead were all pre-World War II models. There were no bazookas, no fast, rapid-firing tanks, no radar equipment, no jet planes.

Franco hopes to get such modern equipment from the United States. But it is not possible to confirm here the Washington reports that he has proposed an alliance with either the United States or with the United States and Portugal in order to get it.

These reports, which some sources here call a "State Department trial balloon," already have caused ill feeling and worry in French, British and other North Atlantic diplomatic circles here. The French and British are particularly dissatisfied. They say they were unable to obtain more than generalities from U. S. Ambassador Stanton Griffis about his long talk with Franco on March 14.

Invalid, His Wife And Sister Slain By 16-Year-Old Nephew

DOVER, N. J., April 1. (AP)—A man, his wife and sister were shot to death in their home and Delaware state police said their 16-year-old nephew confessed today to the triple killing.

William A. Nickle, one of 10 children and with a record of juvenile delinquency, was arrested in Pearson's Corner, Del., where he fled after the shootings about midnight last night.

The dead were Charles Brown, 49, a bedridden invalid, his wife, Mary, 42, a registered nurse and telephone operator, and Brown's sister, Mrs. Myrtle Brown, who had come from her home in Shelbiana, Ky., to help out.

Police at first were baffled for a motive in the killings, but finally Morris County Prosecutor John D. Collins and Dover Police Chief John J. Valley pieced together this theory:

Young Nickle, who had been living with his uncle and aunt for about two years, often had taken their car without permission.

He was reprimanded for this and brooded about it. He bought a .22 calibre rifle from a boyfriend several days ago, telling him he wanted it to shoot squirrels.

A number of other Miamians, including Councilman Melvin Richard and the crime experts of the Miami News, have been active too—and despite all the criticism of this place as a mob spa it's probable that the decent elements of the town supplied the Kefauver committee with more ammunition than the senators picked up anywhere else in the country.

Hills and the Herald lobbed one of the first major bombshells in the great siege of the entrenched mobsters more than two years ago: A double spread which was captioned "Know Your Neighbor" and showed by picture and text the tremendous inroads made in the area's real estate by quiet-spoken muggs with violent crime records. It named names, gave addresses, and listed past performances.

Sullivan is a sturdy, mustachioed ex-F. B. I. man who has patiently and fearlessly built up a towering mountain of evidence against the nation's top hoods. His broadcasts through the state two years ago and more matched the indignation which in recent weeks has seemed to millions to be the patent of Sen. Tobey. But Sullivan, speaking out bluntly though he and his family of nine had to live within reaching distance of brutal and sometimes murderous scoundrels, did not depend solely on viewing with alarm. He was always a sharp identifier, with reams of evidence to back up each charge.

Melvin Richard, a young and sincere Navy veteran, battled the heavy early tides of public apathy despite an offer from the resident and visiting hoods which would have made him a rich man. At a time when he needed the money he turned down a fifth interest in a $1,000,000 a year punch-board racket.

His $200,000 share would have been paid to him each year in legal fees, forwarded by respectable or respectable-sounding business firms and great corporations. He was told, too, that it would be better for appearance's sake if he continued to be the crusader, in print. The mob even offered to provide a number of "accommodation" men for him to arrest. It was a fool-proof offer, but this citizen of a widely deplored area found it easy to resist—though the front man who offered it to him was a man who had done much to win him his place on the Miami Beach council.

• — • — •

It was Greater Miami, the suspect, which did most to bring to the committee's attention the seepage of the brutes into legitimate business.

As a result, the Wall Street Journal was recently able to piece together, with committee help, an astounding picture of the investment of hood funds in business.

It is a picture which deserves its own frame, which I will attempt to provide tomorrow. Bums who have the best interests of this country in their hearts to about the ratio of the most astute Communist subversives have been skimming about $20 billion a year off the bankrolls of America—via gambling, dope-running, extortion, etc. etc.—and cannot bury all of it or give it to Virginia Hill.

So they have in their own words, "gone legit," imperiling the living and the very life of decent competitors. But more anon.

In times of scarcity, it's important to know how to conserve your nylons. Here are the best ways.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

THE WISE girls are all doing everything they can to take care of what nylons they have. How important it is to conserve your hose is proved by the fact that the stocking manufacturers themselves are sending out information on the best result-getting methods.

How To Pamper Nylons

1. You can start your personal campaign by devoting a little more time to the care and feeding of your stockings. They will thrive if you wash them immediately after each wearing, before any soil has time to attack the fibers. To prevent snagging, remove your rings and bracelets before plunging hose into a bath of tepid water and mild soap or detergent. If your hands are at all roughened, wear old, white, cotton gloves while performing this job.

Next, rinse, rinse, rinse until the water runs clear. Never wring hose—it may cause breaks in fibers that are already in a weakened condition from moisture. Instead, roll stockings in an absorbent towel. To complete the drying, hang the hose on snagless rods or clips away from heat of any kind.

2. Store clean hose in smoothly-lined cases or partitioned boxes. Rotate the order in which you wear them. Rest does wonders to insure a stocking's life.

Know-How Does It

3. Put your stockings on with know-how. Roll the leg down to the foot so you can slip your toes in without snagging the mesh. Then, reverse roll the body of the stocking, keeping the seams on an even keel. Every tug on a seam is a coffin nail in a stocking!

Sit down to fasten your garters; doing so you will allow for the strain that always occurs at the knee when you are seated.

4. Carry a run stopper in your purse to catch a snag before it becomes serious. Locate an efficient run repairer.

5. When you must buy stockings be extra fussy about the size. See to it that the size is not only correct for your foot but for your leg. The body of your stocking should be proportioned to the girth and length of your leg and adjustable to the length of your girdle as well. Proportioned hose will flout the stress from garter pull and turning seams.

A Broadway Hit In The Cocoon

"WILL YOU ASK Ed Streeter to come to lunch with us? I think there might be a play in him," said John Golden, the producer on the way back from the Dutch Treat Lunch one day.

He had recently read "Father of the Bride" and was impressed by the craftsmanship and its dramatic qualities. The author is now a New York banker who pursues writing as an avocation. During the first World War and afterwards, he wrote the "Dere Mable" letters which were a great hit, but finally gave up the literary game as we call it for the more lucrative and less gaudy one of finance. We met at Sardi's on a rainy, windy day.

"I'll tell you about a show that made me a lot of money," began Mr. Golden, "and almost didn't. Frank Craven, the actor, was hard up and owed me $2,500, so I said you write a play, and I'll produce it without looking at it. If I read it, I may not like it, and then you're sunk. In six weeks or so, he showed up with a manuscript and said,

"'I want you to hear the first act.'

"'You're taking a chance,' I warned, but he insisted. When he finished, I told him I thought it was good.

"'The rest is better,' he replied confidently, 'and the name of the show is "The First Year."'

"We opened it in Atlantic City, and, after a couple of performances, I knew we had a hit. We moved to Boston and sold out for two weeks, but I had no theater in New York. Klaw and Erlanger controlled all the houses in those days, so I went to see the last half of the team, assuring him I had a sure-fire show.

"'What's it about?' asked Mr. Erlanger.

"'Well, in the first act,' I began, 'a young fellow meets a girl, and they fall in love and get married.'

"'Then, I suppose in the second act they have a fight, and she goes home to her mother,' went on Mr. Erlanger.

"'Yes, that's right,' I agreed.

"'And what happens next?'

"'They make up, and everything turns out all right.'

"'Yes, and you don't get any of my theaters for that show,' announced the boss man.

"There I was with a hit and no place to put it in New York. A week or so later Winthrop Ames offered me the lease on the Little Theater for $50,000, and I snapped it up. For my share of the royalties, which was one-third, I got $400,000. I happen to know, because I still have the amount in government bonds. You see Frank Craven did all right, and besides he got paid for acting the leading role." His cut was the same as Winchell Smith's and mine.

I made a feeble gesture toward the waiter for the check, but Mr. G. said the financial aspects had been taken care of.

"Haven't had a check here in ten years," he explained. "They just tip the waiters and put the whole business on my monthly bill. I am naturally stingy and hate to see tabs. One day I brought Martyn Green, the comedian who plays Ko-Ko in the Mikado, and his wife to lunch here.

"'If Mr. Sardi thinks I have a pretty lady with me, there is no check,' I explained. 'When we walked out without a bill, of course she was flattered.'"

I handed the hat and coat girl a dollar, and Mr. Golden told her to keep the change which she did. I reminded her that took care of my next three visits. As Mr. Streeter and I walked up Forty-fourth Street, a gust of wind and squall of rain hit us, blowing both our umbrellas inside out and his hat half a block toward New Jersey in the gutter. Her had borrowed the rain stick and had to stop to get a replacement for $10. But he may have a Broadway hit in the cocoon.

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

A Broadway Hit In The Cocoon

"WILL YOU ASK Ed Streeter to come to lunch with us? I think there might be a play in him," said John Golden, the producer on the way back from the Dutch Treat Lunch one day.

He had recently read "Father of the Bride" and was impressed by the craftsmanship and its dramatic qualities. The author is now a New York banker who pursues writing as an avocation. During the first World War and afterwards, he wrote the "Dere Mable" letters which were a great hit, but finally gave up the literary game as we call it for the more lucrative and less gaudy one of finance. We met at Sardi's on a rainy, windy day.

"I'll tell you about a show that made me a lot of money," began Mr. Golden, "and almost didn't. Frank Craven, the actor, was hard up and owed me $2,500, so I said you write a play, and I'll produce it without looking at it. If I read it, I may not like it, and then you're sunk. In six weeks or so, he showed up with a manuscript and said,

"'I want you to hear the first act.'

"'You're taking a chance,' I warned, but he insisted. When he finished, I told him I thought it was good.

"'The rest is better,' he replied confidently, 'and the name of the show is "The First Year."'

"We opened it in Atlantic City, and, after a couple of performances, I knew we had a hit. We moved to Boston and sold out for two weeks, but I had no theater in New York. Klaw and Erlanger controlled all the houses in those days, so I went to see the last half of the team, assuring him I had a sure-fire show.

"'What's it about?' asked Mr. Erlanger.

"'Well, in the first act,' I began, 'a young fellow meets a girl, and they fall in love and get married.'

"'Then, I suppose in the second act they have a fight, and she goes home to her mother,' went on Mr. Erlanger.

"'Yes, that's right,' I agreed.

"'And what happens next?'

"'They make up, and everything turns out all right.'

"'Yes, and you don't get any of my theaters for that show,' announced the boss man.

"There I was with a hit and no place to put it in New York. A week or so later Winthrop Ames offered me the lease on the Little Theater for $50,000, and I snapped it up. For my share of the royalties, which was one-third, I got $400,000. I happen to know, because I still have the amount in government bonds. You see Frank Craven did all right, and besides he got paid for acting the leading role." His cut was the same as Winchell Smith's and mine.

I made a feeble gesture toward the waiter for the check, but Mr. G. said the financial aspects had been taken care of.

"Haven't had a check here in ten years," he explained. "They just tip the waiters and put the whole business on my monthly bill. I am naturally stingy and hate to see tabs. One day I brought Martyn Green, the comedian who plays Ko-Ko in the Mikado, and his wife to lunch here.

"'If Mr. Sardi thinks I have a pretty lady with me, there is no check,' I explained. 'When we walked out without a bill, of course she was flattered.'"

I handed the hat and coat girl a dollar, and Mr. Golden told her to keep the change which she did. I reminded her that took care of my next three visits. As Mr. Streeter and I walked up Forty-fourth Street, a gust of wind and squall of rain hit us, blowing both our umbrellas inside out and his hat half a block toward New Jersey in the gutter. He had borrowed the rain stick and had to stop to get a replacement for $10. But he may have a Broadway hit in the cocoon.

MIAMI (INS)

LEST ONE GAIN the impression that nothing was done about the hoodlum empire until television took over and beat it black and blue with the coaxial cable, a couple of fellows in Miami have been punching away at the ruthless rascals for years. They did much to prime them for the recent kayo.

I mean Lee Hills, managing editor of the Miami Herald, and Dan Sullivan, director of the Greater Miami Crime Commission. A number of other Miamians, including Councilman Melvin Richard and the crime experts of the Miami News, have been active too—and despite all the criticism of this place as a mob spa it's probable that the decent elements of the town supplied the Kefauver committee with more ammunition than the senators picked up anywhere else in the country.

Hills and the Herald lobbed one of the first major bombshells in the great siege of the entrenched mobsters more than two years ago: A double spread which was captioned "Know Your Neighbor" and showed by picture and text the tremendous inroads made in the area's real estate by quiet-spoken muggs with violent crime records. It named names, gave addresses, and listed past performances.

• — • — •

Sullivan is a sturdy, mustachioed ex-F. B. I. man who has patiently and fearlessly built up a towering mountain of evidence against the nation's top hoods. His broadcasts through the state two years ago and more matched the indignation which in recent weeks has seemed to millions to be the patent of Sen. Tobey. But Sullivan, speaking out bluntly though he and his family of nine had to live within reaching distance of brutal and sometimes murderous scoundrels, did not depend solely on viewing with alarm. He was always a sharp identifier, with reams of evidence to back up each charge.

Melvin Richard, a young and sincere Navy veteran, battled the heavy early tides of public apathy despite an offer from the resident and visiting hoods which would have made him a rich man. At a time when he needed the money he turned down a fifth interest in a $1,000,000 a year punch-board racket.

His $200,000 share would have been paid to him each year in legal fees, forwarded by respectable or respectable-sounding business firms and great corporations. He was told, too, that it would be better for appearance's sake if he continued to be the crusader, in print. The mob even offered to provide a number of "accommodation" men for him to arrest. It was a foolproof offer, but this citizen of a widely deplored area found it easy to resist—though the front man who offered it to him was a man who had done much to win him his place on the Miami Beach council.

• — • — •

It was Greater Miami, the suspect, which did most to bring to the committee's attention the seepage of the brutes into legitimate business.

As a result, the Wall Street Journal was recently able to piece together, with committee help, an astounding picture of the investment of hood funds in business.

It is a picture which deserves its own frame, which I will attempt to provide tomorrow. Bums who have the best interests of this country in their hearts to about the ratio of the most astute Communist subversives have been skimming about $20 billion a year off the bankrolls of America—via gambling, dope-running, extortion, etc. etc.—and cannot bury all of it or give it to Virginia Hill.

So they have in their own words, "gone legit," imperiling the living and the very life of decent competitors. But more anon.

The Red Cross transported 10,000,000 human blood donations during World War II.

In times of scarcity, it's important to know how to conserve your nylons. Here are the best ways.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

THE WISE girls are all doing everything they can to take care of what nylons they have. How important it is to conserve your hose is proved by the fact that the stocking manufacturers themselves are sending out information on the best result-getting methods.

How To Pamper Nylons

1. You can start your personal campaign by devoting a little more time to the care and feeding of your stockings. They will thrive if you wash them immediately after each wearing, before any soil has time to attack the fibers. To prevent snagging, remove your rings and bracelets before plunging hose into a bath of tepid water and mild soap or detergent. If your hands are at all roughened, wear old, white, cotton gloves while performing this job.

Next, rinse, rinse, rinse until the water runs clear. Never wring hose—it may cause breaks in fibers that are already in a weakened condition from moisture. Instead, roll stockings in an absorbent towel. To complete the drying, hang the hose on snagless rods or clips away from heat of any kind.

2. Store clean hose in smoothly-lined cases or partitioned boxes. Rotate the order in which you wear them. Rest does wonders to insure a stocking's life.

Know-How Does It

3. Put your stockings on with know-how. Roll the leg down to the foot so you can slip your toes in without snagging the mesh. Then, reverse roll the body of the stocking, keeping the seams on an even keel. Every tug on a seam is a coffin nail in a stocking!

Sit down to fasten your garters; doing so you will allow for the strain that always occurs at the knee when you are seated.

4. Carry a run stopper in your purse to catch a snag before it becomes serious. Locate an efficient run repairer.

5. When you must buy stockings be extra fussy about the size. See to it that the size is not only correct for your foot but for your leg. The body of your stocking should be proportioned to the girth and length of your leg and adjustable to the length of your girdle as well. Proportioned hose will flout the stress from garter pull and turning seams.

British Offered Pick Of Franklin Portraits

PHILADELPHIA, April 1 (AP) — A British request for a portrait of Benjamin Franklin got quick action from the United States today: The British were invited to take their pick of four portraits.

The Society for International Understanding in London asked for a painting to display during the 1951 Festival of Britain, which opens May 3.

James Spillan, head of the Poor Richard Society, an advertising club which has Franklin for its "patron saint," cabled back that the society could take its pick of four Franklin paintings belonging to the Poor Richards.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Can you bore someone who loves you?

Answer: Yes. And don't think—or try to make him think—that it is "disloyal" of him to feel that way. Even the person who is closest to you cannot possibly share all your interests or enthusiasms, especially when they involve things about which he or she knows nothing. Husbands and wives are particularly prone to impose on each other with recitals of business or domestic details which mean practically nothing except to the person they directly concern. If you want your partner to be interested in your troubles—or your hobbies—make them interesting to him (or her).

Can an adolescent be too "orderly"?

Answer: Yes. Rigid insistence upon keeping everything "in place" is not a healthy attitude in a teenager—and, of course, is a fairly rare one. What it is likely to mean is that the boy's or girl's reaction to the growing need of making decisions and of doing things on his or her own has been a neurotic fear of "doing the wrong thing." But a child who is habitually more concerned with "Don'ts" than with "Do's" is not on the road to happy living. An untidy room is less apt than a spotless one to be a refuge—or a prison.

Is feeling "abused" neurotic?

Answer: Usually. True, most of us have occasionally to submit to treatment that seems unjust to us, but this probably is balanced by times when we get more than we deserve. As a rule, if you are chronically "abused," it is because you do not stand up for your rights, and this in turn generally means you get a secret satisfaction out of being the victim of others' unkindness. Seeing yourself in that light gives you a neurotic feeling of moral superiority to your tormentors, and a plausible excuse for nursing childish grudges.

British Offered Pick Of Franklin Portraits

PHILADELPHIA, April 1 (AP) — A British request for a portrait of Benjamin Franklin got quick action from the United States today: The British were invited to take their pick of four portraits.

The Society for International Understanding in London asked for a painting to display during the 1951 Festival of Britain, which opens May 3.

James Spillan, head of the Poor Richard Society, an advertising club which has Franklin for its "patron saint," cabled back that the society could take its pick of four Franklin paintings belonging to the Poor Richards.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Can you bore someone who loves you?

Answer: Yes. And don't think—or try to make him think—that it is "disloyal" of him to feel that way. Even the person who is closest to you cannot possibly share all your interests or enthusiasms, especially when they involve things about which he or she knows nothing. Husbands and wives are particularly prone to impose on each other with recitals of business or domestic details which mean practically nothing except to the person they directly concern. If you want your partner to be interested in your troubles—or your hobbies—make them interesting to him (or her).

Can an adolescent be too "orderly"?

Answer: Yes. Rigid insistence upon keeping everything "in place" is not a healthy attitude in a teenager—and, of course, is a fairly rare one. What it is likely to mean is that the boy's or girl's reaction to the growing need of making decisions and of doing things on his or her own has been a neurotic fear of "doing the wrong thing." But a child who is habitually more concerned with "Don'ts" than with "Do's" is not on the road to happy living. An untidy room is less apt than a spotless one to be a refuge—or a prison.

There are 16 Soviet Russian republics.

Is feeling "abused" neurotic?

Answer: Usually. True, most of us have occasionally to submit to treatment that seems unjust to us, but this probably is balanced by times when we get more than we deserve. As a rule, if you are chronically "abused," it is because you do not stand up for your rights, and this in turn generally means you get a secret satisfaction out of being the victim of others' unkindness. Seeing yourself in that light gives you a neurotic feeling of moral superiority to your tormentors, and a plausible excuse for nursing childish grudges.

Call to Action

HAVE you ever wondered how it would feel to go the limit on power and comfort and quality in an automobile?

Or how it would feel to be lord and master of a car that can take its place with the finest in the "fine-car field"?

Then, sir, this is a call to action.

The first action is yours—the simple action of getting in touch with a Buick dealer and planting yourself behind the wheel of a ROADMASTER.

Then let this great-powered and dazzling performer take over.

There's action in every one of the 152 horsepower in its Fireball engine—more action than most proud owners of this eager beauty will ever use.

There's counter-action in its gentle and sure-gripping brakes, the finest that Buick has ever engineered.

But there's also luxury—the luxury of double-depth Foamtex cushions and custom upholstery—and of ample roadweight magnificently poised on coil springs which individually cushion every wheel.

There's a spacious feeling of room, above and around you—room that is unsurpassed anywhere in the fine-car field.

And to make every mile effortless and relaxed, there's the very exclusive advantage of Dynaflow Drive—not as an "extra," but as a standard ROADMASTER feature.

So why not drop in and satisfy yourself, as our guest, that here indeed is a fine car that goes the limit—in everything but price!

Check for yourself what others ask—and what others offer—and you'll discover ROADMASTER prices a call to action that a wise man can't ignore.

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice.

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.

New Outlook On Taxes

When Secretary of the Treasury Snyder appears today before the House Ways and Means Committee on the Administration's tax program, he will find Congress in a different mood on taxes than when he appeared two months ago. Congress is now even more reluctant to grant the full $10 billion tax rise he then asked as a "down payment" on the new emergency tax program, let alone the additional $6.5 billion he said he would ask at a later date.

Almost certainly, Congress will want to treat the new program as a single package. Some Ways and Means members want to make broad changes in Snyder's recommendations for boosting excise taxes. Others would make any increase in personal income taxes effective October 1, instead of retroactive to January 1, as President Truman has asked.

The Secretary's recommendations two months ago were made in anticipation of "a budget deficit of several billion dollars by the last quarter of this fiscal year." However, on March 28 the Treasury surplus rose to $4.8 billion, as result of mid-March tax payments.

Other factors that will influence Congress to pare Snyder's original recommendations are the relativey more advantageous position of the UN forces in Korea — as compared to that of early February — and the prospect of gaining much new revenue by means of a stricter audit of tax returns.

Snyder said on March 27 that a special Treasury fraud unit would "streamline our effort against professional crime's tax evaders." On February 6 — before most of the Kefauver committee's disclosures of big annual "takes" of racketeers — the Bureau of Internal Revenue had predicted that a close check of returns on incomes over $25,000 a year would net the Treasury an additional $2 billion annually.

However deeply the Ways and Means Committee cuts Snyder's $10 billion tax increase recommendations, it is likely to use his specific proposals of February 5 as bases for its new tax bill. The Secretary proposed about $4 billion more from the personal income tax, $3 billion from corporation income tax, $3 billion from hiking present excise tax rates.

He recommended that personal income rates be raised by four percentage points. Thus the starting rate on personal income, applicable to the first $2,000 of taxable net income for a single person and $4,000 for a married couple, would go from 20 to 24 per cent. The rate on incomes of $200,000 and over would go from 91 to 95 per cent.

Snyder recommended that the corporation tax on the first $25,000 of income be raised from 25 to 33 per cent, the general rate on income above $25,000 from 47 to 55 per cent. The combined maximum rate on income subject to the excess profits tax would have risen from 77 to 85 per cent. Snyder said 90 per cent of the burden would fall on the 42,000 corporations with profits over $100,000.

An increase in the tax on passenger automobiles from seven to 20 per cent of manufacturers' prices would furnish, Snyder said on February 5, $685 million in new revenue. The tax on liquor would go up by 60 cents a fifth, on beer up 50 per cent. The tax on some wines would be doubled, on others, more than tripled. That on cigarets would rise by three cents a pack, on gasoline by 1½ cents a gallon. The tax on the manufacturers' prices of television sets, radios, refrigerators, phonographs would hop from 10 to 25 per cent.

Wild Drivers In D. C.

Wild drivers who maim and kill and are immune to arrest, or even to questioning, are the latest of Washington's many worries. In three accidents in a month one person was killed and eight injured, and all three drivers held responsible went scot free. The reason? Diplomatic immunity.

In the most serious accident a car driven by Vincente P. Santaliestra, second secretary of the Spanish embassy, rammed a car driven by a Washington policeman, Rudolph Dido, forcing it on to the sidewalk where a nurse, Mrs. Lillian E. Hess, was killed. Santaliestra, who did not bother to attend the inquest, was held responsible by a coroner's jury for the death of Mrs. Hess.

Five persons were injured when a car driven by Raif Olgun, commercial attache of the Turkish embassy, struck a cab and swerved into a group of pedestrians. Police said the driver ignored a traffic signal.

The third accident occurred when a car driven by one Paul Guillermo Carrizo, Argentine delegate to the Pan American Union, struck another car, the driver of which was injured. Police said Carizzo, who did not have a driver's permit, failed to heed a stop sign.

State Department registered are protected from arrest and from civil action by injured parties under ancient laws enacted in 1791. U. S. personnel is similarly protected in foreign countries.

Washington police are agitating for a change in the laws. They aver that all the trouble is caused by clerks, chauffeurs and servants of ambassadors. High-level envoys violate U. S. laws infrequently and do their best to right any wrong.

Teen-Age Addicts

Of the numerous social ills which afflict the nation, the saddest and most shocking is the increasing number of drug addicts among young people, especially those of high school age. The evidence appears almost daily in the newspapers.

Recently two men who bught to know laid the facts on the line. Samuel Levine, a federal narcotics agent, before the Kefauver committee, testified that the habit begins with marihuana, but the addict soon progresses to heroin, morphine and cocaine. Dr. J. H. Anslinger, commissioner of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, told a House Appropriations subcommittee that it costs from $6 to $15 a day to satisfy the craving for heroin, a high cost which drives teen-agers to crime.

The experts know what needs to be done. Dr. Anslinger recommends much tougher jail sentences for drug peddlers, and better enforcement work. Mr. Levine recommends compulsory treatment for addicts. He also favors greater severity in punishing peddlers, who are "dedicated to a life of lawlessness."

Facilities for treating addicts are everywhere inadequate. So terrible are the consequences of the traffic that some public officials go so far as to suggest that persistent peddling, especially when sales are made to teen-agers, be made a capital offense.

It seems obvious that increased facilities for treatment and increased penalties for illegal distribution of narcotics must go hand in hand. Neither remedy by itself would be wholly effective.

Europe we hear, is running short of dollar exchange again. Who isn't?

Brass Knuckles Are Better

SEVERAL years ago Dr. Frank K. Boland of Atlanta wrote a paper on 60 human bite cases. He preferred to camouflage the cannibalistic nature of the mishaps under the term "morsus humanus." The 36 bites of the face, ears, and arms in this group healed like any other laceration. But the same cannot be said of the 24 finger and hand bites; infection occurred in many and six developed osteomyelitis. In one, amputation of a phalanx was necessary and in two the whole finger; in another, a thumb and forefinger had to be removed. Several were left with deformities and one died. The majority of the victims were women.

Human bites must be cleansed thoroughly to prevent infection. These lesions are ominous because the mouth secretions teem with such organisms as streptococci, staphylococci, fusiform bacilli, and spirochetes. In the mouth, these germs may be harmless but they are far from benign when injected via the teeth into the skin. It has been said that human bites are the most dangerous, followed by those of the cat, camel, and monkey.

The majority of cases stem from brawls in which one person hits another in the mouth. The loser may have a few teeth knocked out or suffer a fractured jaw but the winner—with his gashed and lacerated hand—lands in the hospital. It is the peculiar anatomy of the knuckles that makes such wounds hazardous; if the fist is clenched, the tendons over the joints are stretched. When the mouth is struck the teeth frequently pass thru the tendons and occasionally into the joint itself. After the fingers are relaxed a few moments later, the ends of the tendons retract into the skin to seal the noxious material. Because the area is difficult to cleanse, infection often ensues within a day or two.

Self-inflicted bites are not unusual among sensitive teen-agers and nervous individuals, especially in moments of excitement or suspense. The nail areas are favored sites and now and then the boy or girl will be so vehement that the infection is inevitable. Some prefer to nibble on their nuckles or thumbs. This leads to open sores and the resulting blemishes may be indistinguishable from warts and other tumors. The inside of the cheek is preferred by others. These habits usually are of nervous origin and some like to torture themselves because "It feels so good when I stop."

Bites elsewhere on the body are not common. Facial lesions usually involve the cheeks, lower lips, or nose. As a rule they are inflicted in fights or are sustained by children at play. Some victims are loath to admit the nature of the wound and prefer to keep it a secret. This is a mistake, because proper early treatment is most effective in preventing a serious aftermath. Many require hospitalization inasmuch as sutures and a complete cleansing job are needed. The area frequently becomes swollen, red, and painful. If pus collects, drainage is necessary. Penicillin is valuable in infections of this type and now and then plastic surgery is required to prevent the formation of ugly scars.

TEN MONTH BABIES

Mrs. K. L. writes: My neighbor claims she had two 10 month babies but I don't believe her. Is there such a thing?

REPLY

She ought to know. Actually the period of gestation is nine ordinary months or 10 lunar months (280 days). If your neighbor is scientifically inclined she may be calculating on this basis.

QUANTITY NOT A FACTOR

M. D. E. writes: Is high blood pressure caused by too much blood?

REPLY

No. Victims of polycythemia, who are said to have too much blood, seldom have high blood pressure. On the other hand, a temporary fall of blood pressure occurs after bleeding.

RETURN OF ADENOIDS

F. R. writes: When a child's adenoids grow back after removal, must they be taken out again?

REPLY

Only when they produce obstruction of the nose or of the Eustachian tubes which lead to the ears.

COOK'S SAMPLING

Mrs. R. writes: Since I became a cook I have become fat. Could this be caused by the absorption of cooking odors thru the skin?

REPLY

No, but the absorption of tidbits taken into the digestive tract could do it. Cooks may not enjoy their own cooking but they are fond of samples throughout the day.

HEAD LICE

B. E. writes: Can a dry scalp cause head lice?

REPLY

No, but it causes itching. Vermin and bacteria do not develop spontaneously, as was once believed. They all have mamas and papas and head lice are transmitted by infested individuals, bedding, towels, combs, and brushes.

DREW PEARSON on—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Some Price Officials Sabotage The Public; Kremlin Is Split On Question Of Waging War; Little Business Headaches Have Just Begun

WASHINGTON—One trouble with holding down prices is that some officials inside the Office of Price Stabilization seeme more interested in upping prices than in preventing inflation.

Here's an example of the public-be-hanged behavior of certain officials which occurred at a recent closed-door meeting between price official Charles W. Carvin and representatives of the woolen industry.

This meeting, like most of the important- price - control meetings held in Washington, had no spokesman for the consumer. The group consisted entirely of wool manufacturers — with the exception of Charles Carvin, the government's man. Carvin, however, is not exactly a friend of the consumer, having spent most of his life in the textile industry and currently is on leave from his own large New York textile firm, Charles W. Carvin Co.

During their meeting Carvin and the wool manufacturers discussed the question of how much of a price increase the manufacturers should get, and Carvin astonished the group with this advice:

"Go see Mike DiSalle (OPS administrator). Make him give you a decent increase. With all those demands coming in from the Army for woolen uniforms, he can't turn you down on that price increase. You've got Mike over a barrel."

Carvin is supposed to protect the consumer, prevent inflation. That is the job for which OPS was created. However, as the meeting ended Carvin further advised the woolen manufacturers to talk to Robert O. Huffman, his immediate superior.

"Huffman's a straight thinker on prices," advised Carvin. "Huffman's no administration man, no new dealer."

War Pessimism

Secretary of Defense Marshall hinted in a public statement last week that he was a little more worried than previously about the Soviet's warlike intentions.

Inside reason for this worry is an intelligence estimate indicating that Russia "probably" will not go to war this year because it lacks the resources and its fear of the atomic bomb. However, the analysis also warns there is a small group within the politburo talking of a "preventive war."

Reasoning of this clique is: If Russia waits more than two years, the Western allies will be so strong that a war for Russia would be suicide. It points out the growing strength of the West, the revolts spreading across Eastern Europe, and unrest in Russia itself. Therefore it is argued by extremist leaders in the Kremlin that war is the best way to maintain Soviet domination over Eastern Eupore and China.

It is believed, however, that this view is not held by Stalin, nor by Molotiv, his likely successor. They are understood to believe that capitalism will fall of its own weight, aided by inflation and corruption.

Wise Mr. Wilson

The television audience missed a treat, but Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson was wise when he banned TV cameras at last week's press conference.

Asked by a newsman in the course of the conference whether he had sold his stock in General Electric, the company which he once headed, Wilson shook his finger at the reporter.

"If I had known these controversial questions would be asked . . ." he exploded, implying that if so he would not have agreed to the press conference—only his second during four months in Washington.

Noting the mobilizer's angry brick-red face, a television man signed: "Brother what a shot that would make on color TV."

NOTE—Wilson has given real impetus to defense production, though in the course of doing so, small, independent business has taken a worse beating than in War II.

Russian Dangers

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Fla., April 1—Despite the heartbreaking casualties of the ill-fated Korean campaign, I have not been worried about the temporary successes achieved by the Russians. I am confident that the Chinese tide will turn permanently in our favor if President Truman avoids war with China.

Soviet Imperialism

I have been in the forefront of those who for some years have recognized that our country would one day face a Communist danger. I do not, however, believe that this Chinese threat is by any means the greatest danger facing the nation. Korea has aroused us, rudely to be sure. It has exposed in all its ugly nakedness Russian duplicity, and its threat to our future and to the peace of the world. At last, even the most stupid of our politicians can now see that Russian victory could mean world slavery.

We may never succeed entirely in making the world "safe for democracy"; but our American system is far superior to Russia's in every respect. The Reds may make us dance to their tune for a time; but knowing them for what they are, I don't believe the American people will fall for either the intrigue or violence by which the Kremlin strives to reach its goals. We are too smart to be taken in by their harsh and false doctrines. So I do not fear America going Communistic or being conquered by Moscow's hordes, if we will invest in the soil and forget paper profits.

Enemies Within the U. S.

What very seriously disturbs me is our extremely smug assurance that the Government of the United States is so strong that it can resist every type of inward corrosion. I was a little heartened by the results of the November congressional elections. They indicate that Americans are not so completely sold on the bureaucratic trend in government.

I like to think that, in adidtion to laying bare the evils of the Soviet system, the Korean campaign has also focused some attention on "the enemy within" our own government structure. But, I am not so sure even now that we recognize fully this enemy which is eating our substance through loose fiscal policies, make-believe money, unfair tax structures, excessive government spending for non-essential purposes and various inflationary subsidies.

Keeping Economic Freedom

As I see it, the final answer to the Russian challenge is a better faith and a fuller way of life. Despite its organization and the huge sums of money spent by its supporters, the Communist party has been unable to gain any substantial foothold in our nation. Why? Because here we have a better faith than communism, and a fuller way of life than prevails in Moscow or any of her satellite countries.

So long as we can preserve the religious faith which has helped so mightily to make us the great nation that we are, we need not fear either the ideology or the arms of Russia. So long as we keep government controls at a minimum and maintain intact freedom to work, to save, to invest, even to risk, in worthy ventures, we shall be safe from Russian imperialism. I believe we will do this and, hence, I am an optimist.

Growth Of the U. S. A.

Our country has achieved the status of a great power more quickly than any other nation in the whole history of the world. I believe that we have progressed so quickly because, for the most part, we have been true to the ideals of our forefathers. We surely should pay more attention to those ideals now and develop good old-fashioned character and common sense in our children. Then we will be better able to discern and root out the evils which have been creeping into our government and national life and undermining character and values.

Communism, as Russia practices it today, is no revolutionary idea. Actually, it is just plain imperialism based upon a system of slavery which is as old as the human race. We must not long sit quietly by without preaching more convincingly, and practicing more faithfully, the basic principles of our own American Revolution. One of these is that every family should—for insurance—have some land to till somewhere.

Matter Of Fact

By STEWART ALSOP

Mink Coats And National Survival

WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S recent press conference statement, in which he came out flat-footed against crime, reflected the anguished concern of the Democratic Congressional leaders. They are convinced that both the Kefauver and Fulbright committee investigations have had a downright murderous political effect. Thus Truman's statement praising the work of the Kefauver committee was a rather belated attempt to place the Truman Administration squarely on the side of the angels.

There was, on the other hand, no praise for the work of the Fulbright committee. Certain Democratic leaders had urged Truman to get on the side of the angels here too, by adopting Senator Fulbright's proposal as his own, and appointing a distinguished commission with wide investigative powers to examine the moral standards of government.

The object would be to neutralize at least in part the political effects of the Fulbright revelations of moral sleaziness in the Administration. These worry the Democratic leaders at least as much as the Kefauver revelations of the intimate connections between crime and the big city Democratic machines. But Attorney General McGrath opposed the commission idea. Truman himself heartily dislikes Senator Fulbright. And above all, Truman is still obsessed with the notion that his whole Administration is as pure as the driven snow. Thus nothing is likely to come of the proposal, at least as far as Truman is concerned.

Meanwhile, both investigations are likely to go on—and on and on—in one form or another. The Democratic leaders would of course dearly like to bring the horrid ordeal to an end. But the Republicans are not likely to vote to end investigations which they are unanimously convinced are crucifying the Democrats. And Democrats, whatever the Congressional leadership may wish, are far from eager to seem to vote in favor of sin.

Want Fulbright's Mantle

Thus, although Senator Kefauver himself will no doubt bow out, some sort of crime investigation will be going on for months. As for the Fulbright investigations, a jurisdictional battle between two Senate committees, to decide which one is to inherit Senator Fulbright's mantle, is already in prospect. Senator Clyde Hoey, chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Expenditures, wants to carry on where Fulbright left off, by investigating the defunct Maritime Commission. So does Senator Edwin Johnson, Chairman of the Commerce Committee.

This eagerness to take over is understandable, because the Maritime Commission has for a long time exuded a rich and peculiar odor. Another agency on the list of likely prospects is the Civil Aeronautics Board. If only a fraction of the rumors about political shenanigans in the CAB are true, this also should provide some very fruitful probing. In this case, however, the Republicans may not be so eager for the fray, since a number of Republican Senators have been extraordinarily responsive to the desires of Pan-American Airways, whose remarkable political influence would certainly come under scrutiny.

At any rate, months of klieg-lighted, headline-catching investigations are now apparently inevitable. In many ways, this is a welcome prospect. The moral sleaziness which has been attacking the American political fabric needs holding up to the light. If President Truman continues to take the line that any man he has ever appointed to office is automatically the soul of honor, he will be committing political suicide, as his Congressional leaders are fully aware.

Country Will Survive

Even so, these investigations, past and future, should be viewed in their proper perspective. The fact is that the United States cannot be destroyed either by criminals with big city machine connections or by influence peddlers with friends in key agencies.

It seems to be a law of nature that a moral blight descends on this country after all its big wars. It is only necessary to look back to the Grant and Harding administrations, after the two other great wars which this country has fought, to see that this is so. Indeed, what has so far come to light seems all the more unappetizing because it has been by comparison so petty and unimaginative. In any case, in the end the country will survive its gamblers and influence peddlers, just as it survived its Albert Falls and Jim Fisks and Boss Tweeds.

Yet the survival of the nation is now nevertheless for the first time at stake. This is the fact which the klieg lights, the television, and the atmosphere of high drama which has surrounded the current investigations has served to obscure. There is no question but that the pleasurable excitement about gamblers and mink coats has contributed heavily to the sudden wave of complacency about the world crisis, of which Defense Secretary Marshall recently complained so bitterly. A spring and summer in which the attention of the country continued to be diverted from the problem posed by national survival to the problem posed by mink coats in the White House could be the prelude to disaster.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Sumner Welles Confesses

SUMNER Welles returns to public controversy after a prolonged illness attending the curious circumstances of his departure from the State Department. His resurrection is ushered in by a book, "Seven Decisions that Shaped History," and by the chairmanship of a letterhead organization "Freedom International."

The book is extraordinarily controversial, attacking Cordell Hull, Herbert Hoover, General George Marshall and about everybody else, except Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sumner Welles, who were never wrong. But as I read the book, I could not help recalling that Sumner Welles was in the State Department in extremely important positions from 1933 to 1943 and that he did not speak up at the time to alert the American people. He has waited until 1951 to tell us what we should have known when the mistakes were being made by his own State Department.

For instance, he says:

"In China the Nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek remained in power. There was good reason to assume that with the pledged support of the Soviet Union and of the United States it would gradually overcome the opposition of the Chinese Communists and consolidate its authority over a United Nation."

That, of course, is absolute nonsense and is written only to defend, by implication, the shameless conduct of Roosevelt at Teheran and Yalta. Welles knows that Chiang broke with the Communists in 1927 in such a manner that no peace between them could ever be possible.

Writing of Roosevelt's troubles with Chiank Kai-shek, Sumner Welles says:

". . the repeated—and, it must be admitted, bungling—efforts of several of President Roosevelt's representatives in China to persuade Chiang Kai-shek to comply with the demands of the Chinese Communists were productive of misunderstanding, and damaged the prestige and authority of the Nationalist government.

"Likewise the profound ignorance of China, and the lack of Far Eastern experience, of certain of the President's representatives there served him in ill stead. These envoys spent much of their time quarreling with each other, or with their subordinates; and, while I know of no instance where they did not try to carry out the President's instructions to further the establishment of a strong postwar China, their erroneous judgment and the wide diversity of their recommendations made it impossible for him to obtain any accurate over-all estimate of the situation."

This is important evidence and has often appeared, in one form or another, in this column, but from Sumner Welles, it is of greater value because he was running the State Department when many of the mistakes were made. And he gives no names, no facts, no details. Who are these advisers? Is one of them, perchance, Owen Lattimore or Lauchlin Currie?

Roosevelt, according to Welles, was not only confused by his advisers concerning his China policy, but by General George Marshall concerning the over-all war strategy, Marshall being, according to Welles, incorrect in his information and his decisions.

Welles does not give details as to who it is that made these mistakes. Are we still being governed by the men who were, in his opinion, all wrong? They have, to date, cost us 60,000 casualties. Are they still determining our policy? If you look at the dates, General George Marshall and Dean Acheson made the worst mistakes, but Sumner Welles does not say who advised them regarding Far Eastern affairs.

Again Sumner Welles, defending Roosevelt, says:

"At the Cairo conferences with the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, the President had at his side no expert adviser on Far Eastern affairs. At Yalta also such advice was lacking. If the President had had with him at those two conferences so authoritative and keen-minded an expert on Far Eastern affairs, for example, as Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, who had for many years been the State Department's political adviser on the Far East, a number of defects in the Cairo and Yalta agreements on Asia might well have been avoided."

This is a correct view but incomplete. Roosevelt did have

At a graduate ceremony in the Louisville Male High School, James Young, a member of the Board of Education, told the students, "I remember a day twenty-one years ago when I sat out where you boys are now, and some old duffer got up and made a long, windy speech, none of which I remember." The next speaker on the program was William Duffy, who remarked wryly, "I remember very well the long, windy speech to which Mr. Young refers. I made it."

Friends occasionally josh him about it, but he counters blandly with these words of Sir Joshua Reynolds: "He who resolves never to ransack any but his own mind will soon be reduced, from mere barrenness, to the poorest of all imitations: he will be obliged to imitate himself and to repeat what he has before often repeated."

New Outlook On Taxes

When Secretary of the Treasury Snyder appears today before the House Ways and Means Committee on the Administration's tax program, he will find Congress in a different mood on taxes than when he appeared two months ago. Congress is now even more reluctant to grant the full $10 billion tax rise he then asked as a "down payment" on the new emergency tax program, let alone the additional $6.5 billion he said he would ask at a later date.

Almost certainly, Congress will want to treat the new program as a single package. Some Ways and Means members want to make broad changes in Snyder's recommendations for boosting excise taxes. Others would make any increase in personal income taxes effective October 1, instead of retroactive to January 1, as President Truman has asked.

The Secretary's recommendations two months ago were made in anticipation of "a budget deficit of several billion dollars by the last quarter of this fiscal year." However, on March 28 the Treasury surplus rose to $4.8 billion, as result of mid-March tax payments.

Other factors that will influence Congress to pare Snyder's original recommendations are the relativey more advantageous position of the UN forces in Korea — as compared to that of early February — and the prospect of gaining much new revenue by means of a stricter audit of tax returns.

Snyder said on March 27 that a special Treasury fraud unit would "streamline our effort against professional crime's tax evaders." On February 6 — before most of the Kefauver committee's disclosures of big annual "takes" of racketeers — the Bureau of Internal Revenue had predicted that a close check of returns on incomes over $25,000 a year would net the Treasury an additional $2 billion annually.

However deeply the Ways and Means Committee cuts Snyder's $10 billion tax increase recommendations, it is likely to use his specific proposals of February 5 as bases for its new tax bill. The Secretary proposed about $4 billion more from the personal income tax, $3 billion from corporation income tax, $3 billion from hiking present excise tax rates.

He recommended that personal income rates be raised by four percentage points. Thus the starting rate on personal income, applicable to the first $2,000 of taxable net income for a single person and $4,000 for a married couple, would go from 20 to 24 per cent. The rate on incomes of $200,000 and over would go from 91 to 95 per cent.

Snyder recommended that the corporation tax on the first $25,000 of income be raised from 25 to 33 per cent, the general rate on income above $25,000 from 47 to 55 per cent. The combined maximum rate on income subject to the excess profits tax would have risen from 77 to 85 per cent. Snyder said 90 per cent of the burden would fall on the 42,000 corporations with profits over $100,000.

An increase in the tax on passenger automobiles from seven to 20 per cent of manufacturers' prices would furnish, Snyder said on February 5, $685 million in new revenue. The tax on liquor would go up by 60 cents a fifth, on beer up 50 per cent. The tax on some wines would be doubled, on others, more than tripled. That on cigarets would rise by three cents a pack, on gasoline by 1½ cents a gallon. The tax on the manufacturers' prices of television sets, radios, refrigerators, phonographs would hop from 10 to 25 per cent.

Wild Drivers In D. C.

Wild drivers who maim and kill and are immune to arrest, or even to questioning, are the latest of Washington's many worries. In three accidents in a month one person was killed and eight injured, and all three drivers held responsible went scot free. The reason? Diplomatic immunity.

In the most serious accident a car driven by Vincente P. Santaliestra, second secretary of the Spanish embassy, rammed a car driven by a Washington policeman, Rudolph Dido, forcing it on to the sidewalk where a nurse, Mrs. Lillian E. Hess, was killed. Santaliestra, who did not bother to attend the inquest, was held responsible by a coroner's jury for the death of Mrs. Hess.

Five persons were injured when a car driven by Raif Olgun, commercial attache of the Turkish embassy, struck a cab and swerved into a group of pedestrians. Police said the driver ignored a traffic signal.

The third accident occurred when a car driven by one Paul Guillermo Carrizo, Argentine delegate to the Pan American Union, struck another car, the driver of which was injured. Police said Carizzo, who did not have a driver's permit, failed to heed a stop sign.

State Department registered are protected from arrest and from civil action by injured parties under ancient laws enacted in 1791. U. S. personnel is similarly protected in foreign countries.

Washington police are agitating for a change in the laws. They aver that all the trouble is caused by clerks, chauffeurs and servants of ambassadors. High-level envoys violate U. S. laws infrequently and do their best to right any wrong.

Teen-Age Addicts

Of the numerous social ills which afflict the nation, the saddest and most shocking is the increasing number of drug addicts among young people, especially those of high school age. The evidence appears almost daily in the newspapers.

Recently two men who bught to know laid the facts on the line. Samuel Levine, a federal narcotics agent, before the Kefauver committee, testified that the habit begins with marihuana, but the addict soon progresses to heroin, morphine and cocaine. Dr. J. H. Anslinger, commissioner of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, told a House Appropriations subcommittee that it costs from $6 to $15 a day to satisfy the craving for heroin, a high cost which drives teen-agers to crime.

The experts know what needs to be done. Dr. Anslinger recommends much tougher jail sentences for drug peddlers, and better enforcement work. Mr. Levine recommends compulsory treatment for addicts. He also favors greater severity in punishing peddlers, who are "dedicated to a life of lawlessness."

Facilities for treating addicts are everywhere inadequate. So terrible are the consequences of the traffic that some public officials go so far as to suggest that persistent peddling, especially when sales are made to teen-agers, be made a capital offense.

It seems obvious that increased facilities for treatment and increased penalties for illegal distribution of narcotics must go hand in hand. Neither remedy by itself would be wholly effective.

Europe we hear, is running short of dollar exchange again. Who isn't?

Brass Knuckles Are Better

SEVERAL years ago Dr. Frank K. Boland of Atlanta wrote a paper on 60 human bite cases. He preferred to camouflage the cannibalistic nature of the mishaps under the term "morsus humanus." The 36 bites of the face, ears, and arms in this group healed like any other laceration. But the same cannot be said of the 24 finger and hand bites; infection occurred in many and six developed osteomyelitis. In one, amputation of a phalanx was necessary and in two the whole finger; in another, a thumb and forefinger had to be removed. Several were left with deformities and one died. The majority of the victims were women.

Human bites must be cleansed thoroughly to prevent infection. These lesions are ominous because the mouth secretions teem with such organisms as streptococci, staphylococci, fusiform bacilli, and spirochetes. In the mouth, these germs may be harmless but they are far from benign when injected via the teeth into the skin. It has been said that human bites are the most dangerous, followed by those of the cat, camel, and monkey.

The majority of cases stem from brawls in which one person hits another in the mouth. The loser may have a few teeth knocked out or suffer a fractured jaw but the winner—with his gashed and lacerated hand—lands in the hospital. It is the peculiar anatomy of the knuckles that makes such wounds hazardous; if the fist is clenched, the tendons over the joints are stretched. When the mouth is struck the teeth frequently pass thru the tendons and occasionally into the joint itself. After the fingers are relaxed a few moments later, the ends of the tendons retract into the skin to seal the noxious material. Because the area is difficult to cleanse, infection often ensues within a day or two.

Self-inflicted bites are not unusual among sensitive teen-agers and nervous individuals, especially in moments of excitement or suspense. The nail areas are favored sites and now and then the boy or girl will be so vehement that the infection is inevitable. Some prefer to nibble on their nuckles or thumbs. This leads to open sores and the resulting blemishes may be indistinguishable from warts and other tumors. The inside of the cheek is preferred by others. These habits usually are of nervous origin and some like to torture themselves because "It feels so good when I stop."

Bites elsewhere on the body are not common. Facial lesions usually involve the cheeks, lower lips, or nose. As a rule they are inflicted in fights or are sustained by children at play. Some victims are loath to admit the nature of the wound and prefer to keep it a secret. This is a mistake, because proper early treatment is most effective in preventing a serious aftermath. Many require hospitalization inasmuch as sutures and a complete cleansing job are needed. The area frequently becomes swollen, red, and painful. If pus collects, drainage is necessary. Penicillin is valuable in infections of this type and now and then plastic surgery is required to prevent the formation of ugly scars.

TEN MONTH BABIES

Mrs. K. L. writes: My neighbor claims she had two 10 month babies but I don't believe her. Is there such a thing?

REPLY

She ought to know. Actually the period of gestation is nine ordinary months or 10 lunar months (280 days). If your neighbor is scientifically inclined she may be calculating on this basis.

QUANTITY NOT A FACTOR

M. D. E. writes: Is high blood pressure caused by too much blood?

REPLY

No. Victims of polycythemia, who are said to have too much blood, seldom have high blood pressure. On the other hand, a temporary fall of blood pressure occurs after bleeding.

RETURN OF ADENOIDS

F. R. writes: When a child's adenoids grow back after removal, must they be taken out again?

REPLY

Only when they produce obstruction of the nose or of the Eustachian tubes which lead to the ears.

COOK'S SAMPLING

Mrs. R. writes: Since I became a cook I have become fat. Could this be caused by the absorption of cooking odors thru the skin?

REPLY

No, but the absorption of tidbits taken into the digestive tract could do it. Cooks may not enjoy their own cooking but they are fond of samples throughout the day.

HEAD LICE

B. E. writes: Can a dry scalp cause head lice?

REPLY

No, but it causes itching. Vermin and bacteria do not develop spontaneously, as was once believed. They all have mamas and papas and head lice are transmitted by infested individuals, bedding, towels, combs, and brushes.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Some Price Officials Sabotage The Public; Kremlin Is Split On Question Of Waging War; Little Business Headaches Have Just Begun

WASHINGTON—One trouble with holding down prices is that some officials inside the Office of Price Stabilization seeme more interested in upping prices than in preventing inflation.

Here's an example of the public-be-hanged behavior of certain officials which occurred at a recent closed-door meeting between price official Charles W. Carvin and representatives of the woolen industry.

This meeting, like most of the important- price - control meetings held in Washington, had no spokesman for the consumer. The group consisted entirely of wool manufacturers — with the exception of Charles Carvin, the government's man. Carvin, however, is not exactly a friend of the consumer, having spent most of his life in the textile industry and currently is on leave from his own large New York textile firm, Charles W. Carvin Co.

During their meeting Carvin and the wool manufacturers discussed the question of how much of a price increase the manufacturers should get, and Carvin astonished the group with this advice:

"Go see Mike DiSalle (OPS administrator). Make him give you a decent increase. With all those demands coming in from the Army for woolen uniforms, he can't turn you down on that price increase. You've got Mike over a barrel."

Carvin is supposed to protect the consumer, prevent inflation. That is the job for which OPS was created. However, as the meeting ended Carvin further advised the woolen manufacturers to talk to Robert O. Huffman, his immediate superior.

"Huffman's a straight thinker on prices," advised Carvin. "Huffman's no administration man, no new dealer."

War Pessimism

Secretary of Defense Marshall hinted in a public statement last week that he was a little more worried than previously about the Soviet's warlike intentions.

Inside reason for this worry is an intelligence estimate indicating that Russia "probably" will not go to war this year because it lacks the resources and its fear of the atomic bomb. However, the analysis also warns there is a small group within the politburo talking of a "preventive war."

Reasoning of this clique is: If Russia waits more than two years, the Western allies will be so strong that a war for Russia would be suicide. It points out the growing strength of the West, the revolts spreading across Eastern Europe, and unrest in Russia itself. Therefore it is argued by extremist leaders in the Kremlin that war is the best way to maintain Soviet domination over Eastern Eupore and China.

It is believed, however, that this view is not held by Stalin, nor by Molotiv, his likely successor. They are understood to believe that capitalism will fall of its own weight, aided by inflation and corruption.

Wise Mr. Wilson

The television audience missed a treat, but Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson was wise when he banned TV cameras at last week's press conference.

Asked by a newsman in the course of the conference whether he had sold his stock in General Electric, the company which he once headed, Wilson shook his finger at the reporter.

"If I had known these controversial questions would be asked . . ." he exploded, implying that if so he would not have agreed to the press conference—only his second during four months in Washington.

Noting the mobilizer's angry brick-red face, a television man signed: "Brother what a shot that would make on color TV."

NOTE—Wilson has given real impetus to defense production, though in the course of doing so, small, independent business has taken a worse beating than in War II.

Our country has achieved the status of a great power more quickly than any other nation in the whole history of the world. I believe that we have progressed so quickly because, for the most part, we have been true to the ideals of our forefathers. We surely should pay more attention to those ideals now and develop good old-fashioned character and common sense in our children. Then we will be better able to discern and root out the evils which have been creeping into our government and national life and undermining character and values.

Communism, as Russia practices it today, is no revolutionary idea. Actually, it is just plain imperialism based upon a system of slavery which is as old as the human race. We must not long sit quietly by without preaching more convincingly, and practicing more faithfully, the basic principles of our own American Revolution. One of these is that every family should—for insurance—have some land to till somewhere.

Matter Of Fact

By STEWART ALSOP

Mink Coats And National Survival

WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S recent press conference statement, in which he came out flat-footed against crime, reflected the anguished concern of the Democratic Congressional leaders. They are convinced that both the Kefauver and Fulbright committee investigations have had a downright murderous political effect. Thus Truman's statement praising the work of the Kefauver committee was a rather belated attempt to place the Truman Administration squarely on the side of the angels.

There was, on the other hand, no praise for the work of the Fulbright committee. Certain Democratic leaders had urged Truman to get on the side of the angels here too, by adopting Senator Fulbright's proposal as his own, and appointing a distinguished commission with wide investigative powers to examine the moral standards of government.

The object would be to neutralize at least in part the political effects of the Fulbright revelations of moral sleaziness in the Administration. These worry the Democratic leaders at least as much as the Kefauver revelations of the intimate connections between crime and the big city Democratic machines. But Attorney General McGrath opposed the commission idea. Truman himself heartily dislikes Senator Fulbright. And above all, Truman is still obsessed with the notion that his whole Administration is as pure as the driven snow. Thus nothing is likely to come of the proposal, at least as far as Truman is concerned.

Meanwhile, both investigations are likely to go on—and on and on—in one form or another. The Democratic leaders would of course dearly like to bring the horrid ordeal to an end. But the Republicans are not likely to vote to end investigations which they are unanimously convinced are crucifying the Democrats. And Democrats, whatever the Congressional leadership may wish, are far from eager to seem to vote in favor of sin.

Want Fulbright's Mantle

Thus, although Senator Kefauver himself will no doubt bow out, some sort of crime investigation will be going on for months. As for the Fulbright investigations, a jurisdictional battle between two Senate committees, to decide which one is to inherit Senator Fulbright's mantle, is already in prospect. Senator Clyde Hoey, chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Expenditures, wants to carry on where Fulbright left off, by investigating the defunct Maritime Commission. So does Senator Edwin Johnson, Chairman of the Commerce Committee.

This eagerness to take over is understandable, because the Maritime Commission has for a long time exuded a rich and peculiar odor. Another agency on the list of likely prospects is the Civil Aeronautics Board. If only a fraction of the rumors about political shenanigans in the CAB are true, this also should provide some very fruity probing. In this case, however, the Republicans may not be so eager for the fray, since a number of Republican Senators have been extraordinarily responsive to the desires of Pan-American Airways, whose remarkable political influence would certainly come under scrutiny.

At any rate, months of klieglighted, headline-catching investigations are now apparently inevitable. In many ways, this is a welcome prospect. The moral sleaziness which has been attacking the American political fabric needs holding up to the light. If President Truman continues to take the line that any man he has ever appointed to office is automatically the soul of honor, he will be committing political suicide, as his Congressional leaders are fully aware.

Country Will Survive

Even so, these investigations, past and future, should be viewed in their proper perspective. The fact is that the United States cannot be destroyed either by criminals with big city machine connections or by influence peddlers with friends in key agencies.

It seems to be a law of nature that a moral blight descends on this country after all its big wars. It is only necessary to look back to the Grant and Harding administrations, after the two other great wars which this country has fought, to see that this is so. Indeed, what has so far come to light seems all the more unappetizing because it has been by comparison so petty and unimaginative. In any case, in the end the country will survive its gamblers and influence peddlers, just as it survived its Albert Falls and Jim Fisks and Boss Tweeds.

Yet the survival of the nation is now nevertheless for the first time at stake. This is the fact which the klieg lights, the television, and the atmosphere of high drama which has surrounded the current investigations has served to obscure. There is no question but that the pleasurable excitement about gamblers and mink coats has contributed heavily to the sudden wave of complacency about the world crisis, of which Defense Secretary Marshall recently complained so bitterly. A spring and summer in which the attention of the country continued to be diverted from the problem posed by national survival to the problem posed by mink coats in the White House could be the prelude to disaster.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Sumner Welles Confesses

SUMNER Welles returns to public controversy after a prolonged illness attending the curious circumstances of his departure from the State Department. His resurrection is ushered in by a book, "Seven Decisions that Shaped History," and by the chairmanship of a letterhead organization "Freedom International."

The book is extraordinarily controversial, attacking Cordell Hull, Herbert Hoover, General George Marshall and about everybody else, except Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sumner Welles, who were never wrong. But as I read the book, I could not help recalling that Sumner Welles was in the State Department in extremely important positions from 1933 to 1943 and that he did not speak up at the time to alert the American people. He has waited until 1951 to tell us what we should have known when the mistakes were being made by his own State Department.

For instance, he says:

"In China the Nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek remained in power. There was good reason to assume that with the pledged support of the Soviet Union and of the United States it would gradually overcome the opposition of the Chinese Communists and consolidate its authority over a United Nation."

That, of course, is absolute nonsense and is written only to defend, by implication, the shameless conduct of Roosevelt at Teheran and Yalta. Welles knows that Chiang broke with the Communists in 1927 in such a manner that no peace between them could ever be possible.

Writing of Roosevelt's troubles with Chiank Kai-shek, Sumner Welles says:

". . .the repeated—and, it must be admitted, bungling—efforts of several of President Roosevelt's representatives in China to persuade Chiang Kai-shek to comply with the demands of the Chinese Communists were productive of misunderstanding, and damaged the prestige and authority of the Nationalist government.

"Likewise the profound ignorance of China, and the lack of Far Eastern experience, of certain of the President's representatives there served him in ill stead. These envoys spent much of their time quarreling with each other, or with their subordinates; and, while I know of no instance where they did not try to carry out the President's instructions to further the establishment of a strong postwar China, their erroneous judgment and the wide diversity of their recommendations made it impossible for him to obtain any accurate over-all estimate of the situation."

This is important evidence and has often appeared, in one form or another, in this column, but from Sumner Welles, it is of greater value because he was running the State Department when many of the mistakes were made. And he gives no names, no facts, no details. Who are these advisers? Is one of them, perchance, Owen Lattimore or Lauchlin Currie?

Roosevelt, according to Welles, was not only confused by his advisers concerning his China policy, but by General George Marshall concerning the over-all war strategy, Marshall being, according to Welles, incorrect in his information and his decisions.

Welles does not give details as to who it is that made these mistakes. Are we still being governed by the men who were, in his opinion, all wrong? They have, to date, cost us 60,000 casualties. Are they still determining our policy? If you look at the dates, General George Marshall and Dean Acheson made the worst mistakes, but Sumner Welles does not say who advised them regarding Far Eastern affairs.

Again Sumner Welles, defending Roosevelt, says:

"At the Cairo conferences with the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, the President had at his side no expert adviser on Far Eastern affairs. At Yalta also such advice was lacking. If the President had had with him at those two conferences so authoritative and keen-minded an expert on Far Eastern affairs, for example, as Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, who had for many years been the State Department's political adviser on the Far East, a number of defects in the Cairo and Yalta agreements on Asia might well have been avoided."

This is a correct view but incomplete. Roosevelt did have

New Outlook On Taxes

When Secretary of the Treasury Snyder appears today before the House Ways and Means Committee on the Administration's tax program, he will find Congress in a different mood on taxes than when he appeared two months ago. Congress is now even more reluctant to grant the full $10 billion tax rise he then asked as a "down payment" on the new emergency tax program, let alone the additional $6.5 billion he said he would ask at a later date.

Almost certainly, Congress will want to treat the new program as a single package. Some Ways and Means members want to make broad changes in Snyder's recommendations for boosting excise taxes. Others would make any increase in personal income taxes effective October 1, instead of retroactive to January 1, as President Truman has asked.

The Secretary's recommendations two months ago were made in anticipation of "a budget deficit of several billion dollars by the last quarter of this fiscal year." However, on March 28 the Treasury surplus rose to $4.8 billion, as result of mid-March tax payments.

Other factors that will influence Congress to pare Snyder's original recommendations are the relativey more advantageous position of the UN forces in Korea — as compared to that of early February — and the prospect of gaining much new revenue by means of a stricter audit of tax returns.

Snyder said on March 27 that a special Treasury fraud unit would "streamline our effort against professional crime's tax evaders." On February 6 — before most of the Kefauver committee's disclosures of big annual "takes" of racketeers — the Bureau of Internal Revenue had predicted that a close check of returns on incomes over $25,000 a year would net the Treasury an additional $2 billion annually.

However deeply the Ways and Means Committee cuts Snyder's $10 billion tax increase recommendations, it is likely to use his specific proposals of February 5 as bases for its new tax bill. The Secretary proposed about $4 billion more from the personal income tax, $3 billion from corporation income tax, $3 billion from hiking present excise tax rates.

He recommended that personal income rates be raised by four percentage points. Thus the starting rate on personal income, applicable to the first $2,000 of taxable net income for a single person and $4,000 for a married couple, would go from 20 to 24 per cent. The rate on incomes of $200,000 and over would go from 91 to 95 per cent.

Snyder recommended that the corporation tax on the first $25,000 of income be raised from 25 to 33 per cent, the general rate on income above $25,000 from 47 to 55 per cent. The combined maximum rate on income subject to the excess profits tax would have risen from 77 to 85 per cent. Snyder said 90 per cent of the burden would fall on the 42,000 corporations with profits over $100,000.

An increase in the tax on passenger automobiles from seven to 20 per cent of manufacturers' prices would furnish, Snyder said on February 5, $685 million in new revenue. The tax on liquor would go up by 60 cents a fifth, on beer up 50 per cent. The tax on some wines would be doubled, on others, more than tripled. That on cigarets would rise by three cents a pack, on gasoline by 1½ cents a gallon. The tax on the manufacturers' prices of television sets, radios, refrigerators, phonographs would hop from 10 to 25 per cent.

Wild Drivers In D. C.

Wild drivers who maim and kill and are immune to arrest, or even to questioning, are the latest of Washington's many worries. In three accidents in a month one person was killed and eight injured, and all three drivers held responsible went scot free. The reason? Diplomatic immunity.

In the most serious accident a car driven by Vincente P. Santaliestra, second secretary of the Spanish embassy, rammed a car driven by a Washington policeman, Rudolph Dido, forcing it on to the sidewalk where a nurse, Mrs. Lillian E. Hess, was killed. Santaliestra, who did not bother to attend the inquest, was held responsible by a coroner's jury for the death of Mrs. Hess.

Five persons were injured when a car driven by Raif Olgun, commercial attache of the Turkish embassy, struck a cab and swerved into a group of pedestrians. Police said the driver ignored a traffic signal.

The third accident occurred when a car driven by one Paul Guillermo Carrizo, Argentine delegate to the Pan American Union, struck another car, the driver of which was injured. Police said Carizzo, who did not have a driver's permit, failed to heed a stop sign.

State Department registered are protected from arrest and from civil action by injured parties under ancient laws enacted in 1791. U. S. personnel is similarly protected in foreign countries.

Washington police are agitating for a change in the laws. They aver that all the trouble is caused by clerks, chauffeurs and servants of ambassadors. High-level envoys violate U. S. laws infrequently and do their best to right any wrong.

Teen-Age Addicts

Of the numerous social ills which afflict the nation, the saddest and most shocking is the increasing number of drug addicts among young people, especially those of high school age. The evidence appears almost daily in the newspapers.

Recently two men who bught to know laid the facts on the line. Samuel Levine, a federal narcotics agent, before the Kefauver committee, testified that the habit begins with marihuana, but the addict soon progresses to heroin, morphine and cocaine. Dr. J. H. Anslinger, commissioner of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, told a House Appropriations subcommittee that it costs from $6 to $15 a day to satisfy the craving for heroin, a high cost which drives teen-agers to crime.

The experts know what needs to be done. Dr. Anslinger recommends much tougher jail sentences for drug peddlers, and better enforcement work. Mr. Levine recommends compulsory treatment for addicts. He also favors greater severity in punishing peddlers, who are "dedicated to a life of lawlessness."

Facilities for treating addicts are everywhere inadequate. So terrible are the consequences of the traffic that some public officials go so far as to suggest that persistent peddling, especially when sales are made to teen-agers, be made a capital offense.

It seems obvious that increased facilities for treatment and increased penalties for illegal distribution of narcotics must go hand in hand. Neither remedy by itself would be wholly effective.

Europe we hear, is running short of dollar exchange again. Who isn't?

How To Keep Well

Brass Knuckles Are Better

SEVERAL years ago Dr. Frank K. Boland of Atlanta wrote a paper on 60 human bite cases. He preferred to camouflage the cannibalistic nature of the mishaps under the term "morsus humanus." The 36 bites of the face, ears, and arms in this group healed like any other laceration. But the same cannot be said of the 24 finger and hand bites; infection occurred in many and six developed osteomyelitis. In one, amputation of a phalanx was necessary and in two the whole finger; in another, a thumb and forefinger had to be removed. Several were left with deformities and one died. The majority of the victims were women.

Human bites must be cleansed thoroughly to prevent infection. These lesions are ominous because the mouth secretions teem with such organisms as streptococci, staphylococci, fusiform bacilli, and spirochetes. In the mouth, these germs may be harmless but they are far from benign when injected via the teeth into the skin. It has been said that human bites are the most dangerous, followed by those of the cat, camel, and monkey.

The majority of cases stem from brawls in which one person hits another in the mouth. The loser may have a few teeth knocked out or suffer a fractured jaw but the winner—with his gashed and lacerated hand—lands in the hospital. It is the peculiar anatomy of the knuckles that makes such wounds hazardous; if the fist is clenched, the tendons over the joints are stretched. When the mouth is struck the teeth frequently pass thru the tendons and occasionally into the joint itself. After the fingers are relaxed a few moments later, the ends of the tendons retract into the skin to seal the noxious material. Because the area is difficult to cleanse, infection often ensues within a day or two.

Self-inflicted bites are not unusual among sensitive teen-agers and nervous individuals, especially in moments of excitement or suspense. The nail areas are favored sites and now and then the boy or girl will be so vehement that the infection is inevitable. Some prefer to nibble on their nuckles or thumbs. This leads to open sores and the resulting blemishes may be indistinguishable from warts and other tumors. The inside of the cheek is preferred by others. These habits usually are of nervous origin and some like to torture themselves because "It feels so good when I stop."

Bites elsewhere on the body are not common. Facial lesions usually involve the cheeks, lower lips, or nose. As a rule they are inflicted in fights or are sustained by children at play. Some victims are loath to admit the nature of the wound and prefer to keep it a secret. This is a mistake, because proper early treatment is most effective in preventing a serious aftermath. Many require hospitalization inasmuch as sutures and a complete cleansing job are needed. The area frequently becomes swollen, red, and painful. If pus collects, drainage is necessary. Penicillin is valuable in infections of this type and now and then plastic surgery is required to prevent the formation of ugly scars.

TEN MONTH BABIES

Mrs. K. L. writes: My neighbor claims she had two 10 month babies but I don't believe her. Is there such a thing?

REPLY

She ought to know. Actually the period of gestation is nine ordinary months or 10 lunar months (280 days). If your neighbor is scientifically inclined she may be calculating on this basis.

QUANTITY NOT A FACTOR

M. D. E. writes: Is high blood pressure caused by too much blood?

REPLY

No. Victims of polycythemia, who are said to have too much blood, seldom have high blood pressure. On the other hand, a temporary fall of blood pressure occurs after bleeding.

RETURN OF ADENOIDS

P. R. writes: When a child's adenoids grow back after removal, must they be taken out again?

REPLY

Only when they produce obstruction of the nose or of the Eustachian tubes which lead to the ears.

COOK'S SAMPLING

Mrs. R. writes: Since I became a cook I have become fat. Could this be caused by the absorption of cooking odors thru the skin?

REPLY

No, but the absorption of tidbits taken into the digestive tract could do it. Cooks may not enjoy their own cooking but they are fond of samples throughout the day.

HEAD LICE

B. E. writes: Can a dry scalp cause head lice?

REPLY

No, but it causes itching. Vermin and bacteria do not develop spontaneously, as was once believed. They all have mamas and papas and head lice are transmitted by infested individuals, bedding, towels, combs, and brushes.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Some Price Officials Sabotage The Public; Kremlin Is Split On Question Of Waging War; Little Business Headaches Have Just Begun

WASHINGTON—One trouble with holding down prices is that some officials inside the Office of Price Stabilization seeme more interested in upping prices than in preventing inflation.

Here's an example of the public-be-hanged behavior of certain officials which occurred at a recent closed-door meeting between price official Charles W. Carvin and representatives of the woolen industry.

This meeting, like most of the important- price-control meetings held in Washington, had no spokesman for the consumer. The group consisted entirely of wool manufacturers — with the exception of Charles Carvin, the government's man. Carvin, however, is not exactly a friend of the consumer, having spent most of his life in the textile industry and currently is on leave from his own large New York textile firm, Charles W. Carvin Co.

During their meeting Carvin and the wool manufacturers discussed the question of how much of a price increase the manufacturers should get, and Carvin astonished the group with this advice:

"Go see Mike DiSalle (OPS administrator). Make him give you a decent increase. With all those demands coming in from the Army for woolen uniforms, he can't turn you down on that price increase. You've got Mike over a barrel."

Carvin is supposed to protect the consumer, prevent inflation. That is the job for which OPS was created. However, as the meeting ended Carvin further advised the woolen manufacturers to talk to Robert O. Huffman, his immediate superior.

"Huffman's a straight thinker on prices," advised Carvin. "Huffman's no administration man, no new dealer."

War Pessimism

Secretary of Defense Marshall hinted in a public statement last week that he was a little more worried than previously about the Soviet's warlike intentions.

Inside reason for this worry is an intelligence estimate indicating that Russia "probably" will not go to war this year because it lacks the resources and its fear of the atomic bomb. However, the analysis also warns there is a small group within the politburo talking of a "preventive war."

Reasoning of this clique is: If Russia waits more than two years, the Western allies will be so strong that a war for Russia would be suicide. It points out the growing strength of the West, the revolts spreading across Eastern Europe, and unrest in Russia itself. Therefore it is argued by extremist leaders in the Kremlin that war is the best way to maintain Soviet domination over Eastern Eupore and China.

It is believed, however, that this view is not held by Stalin, nor by Molotiv, his likely successor. They are understood to believe that capitalism will fall of its own weight, aided by inflation and corruption.

Wise Mr. Wilson

The television audience missed a treat, but Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson was wise when he banned TV cameras at last week's press conference.

Asked by a newsman in the course of the conference whether he had sold his stock in General Electric, the company which he once headed, Wilson shook his finger at the reporter.

"If I had known these controversial questions would be asked . . ." he exploded, implying that if so he would not have agreed to the press conference—only his second during four months in Washington.

Noting the mobilizer's angry brick-red face, a television man signed: "Brother what a shot that would make on color TV."

NOTE—Wilson has given real impetus to defense production, though in the course of doing so, small, independent business has taken a worse beating than in War II.

Washington Pipeline

A lot of good men are getting into government you never hear about—at salary sacrifices. One of the latest: Thurman L. Bernard, who took an 85 per cent cut from advertising Ivory soap to help with State Department propaganda . . . It was New Hampshire's Sen. Styles Bridges who went to bat for Democratic Senator Kefauver's Crime Committee in the secrecy of the GOP Policy Committee . . . Col. Grady Gore, who made money in plumbing fixtures and now owns Washington's swank Fairfax Hotel, plans to be the next GOP Senator from Maryland. Jon Jonkel, of the Chicago Tribune, the man who fixed up the smear tabloid against Senator Tydings, may do a repeat as campaign manager . . . . Labor leaders, fed up with John Steelman, are insisting on their own man in the White House. They claim they have nobody near the President to represent them . . . . Truman was so flabbergasted you could have knocked him over with a feather when the labor leaders turned against him. He had no idea his labor relations were so bad.

Little-Business Headaches

The little businessman's headaches under defense controls have only begun. The next 18 months will be even tougher on him, according to secret testimony before the House Small Business Committee.

Military requirements for aluminum, for instance, will increase at such a rate in 1951 and 1952 that many small firms producing non-defense aluminum products may

Russian Dangers

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Fla., April 1—Despite the heartbreaking casualties of the ill-fated Korean campaign, I have not been worried about the temporary successes achieved by the Russians. I am confident that the Chinese tide will turn permanently in our favor if President Truman avoids war with China.

Soviet Imperialism

I have been in the forefront of those who for some years have recognized that our country would one day face a Communist danger. I do not, however, believe that this Chinese threat is by any means the greatest danger facing the nation. Korea has aroused us, rudely to be sure. It has exposed in all its ugly nakedness Russian duplicity, and its threat to our future and to the peace of the world. At last, even the most stupid of our politicians can now see that Russian victory could mean world slavery.

We may never succeed entirely in making the world "safe for democracy"; but our American system is far superior to Russia's in every respect. The Reds may make us dance to their tune for a time; but knowing them for what they are, I don't believe the American people will fall for either the intrigue or violence by which the Kremlin strives to reach its goals. We are too smart to be taken in by their harsh and false doctrines. So I do not fear America going Communistic or being conquered by Moscow's hordes, if we will invest in the soil and forget paper profits.

Enemies Within the U. S.

What very seriously disturbs me is our extremely smug assurance that the Government of the United States is so strong that it can resist every type of inward corrosion. I was a little heartened by the results of the November congressional elections. They indicate that Americans are not so completely sold on the bureaucratic trend in government.

I like to think that, in addition to laying bare the evils of the Soviet system, the Korean campaign has also focused some attention on "the enemy within" our own government structure. But, I am not so sure even now that we recognize fully this enemy which is eating our substance through loose fiscal policies, make-believe money, unfair tax structures, excessive government spending for non-essential purposes and various inflationary subsidies.

Keeping Economic Freedom

As I see it, the final answer to the Russian challenge is a better faith and a fuller way of life. Despite its organization and the huge sums of money spent by its supporters, the Communist party has been unable to gain any substantial foothold in our nation. Why? Because here we have a better faith than communism, and a fuller way of life than prevails in Moscow or any of her satellite countries.

So long as we can preserve the religious faith which has helped so mightily to make us the great nation that we are, we need not fear either the ideology or the arms of Russia. So long as we keep government controls at a minimum and maintain intact freedom to work, to save, to invest, even to risk, in worthy ventures, we shall be safe from Russian imperialism. I believe we will do this and, hence, I am an optimist.

Growth Of the U. S. A.

Our country has achieved the status of a great power more quickly than any other nation in the whole history of the world. I believe that we have progressed so quickly because, for the most part, we have been true to the ideals of our forefathers. We surely should pay more attention to those ideals now and develop good old-fashioned character and common sense in our children. Then we will be better able to discern and root out the evils which have been creeping into our government and national life and undermining character and values.

Communism, as Russia practices it today, is no revolutionary idea. Actually, it is just plain imperialism based upon a system of slavery which is as old as the human race. We must not long sit quietly by without preaching more convincingly, and practicing more faithfully, the basic principles of our own American Revolution. One of these is that every family should—for insurance—have some land to till somewhere.

Matter Of Fact

By STEWART ALSOP

Mink Coats And National Survival

WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S recent press conference statement, in which he came out flat-footed against crime, reflected the anguished concern of the Democratic Congressional leaders. They are convinced that both the Kefauver and Fulbright committee investigations have had a downright murderous political effect. Thus Truman's statement praising the work of the Kefauver committee was a rather belated attempt to place the Truman Administration squarely on the side of the angels.

There was, on the other hand, no praise for the work of the Fulbright committee. Certain Democratic leaders had urged Truman to get on the side of the angels here too, by adopting Senator Fulbright's proposal as his own, and appointing a distinguished commission with wide investigative powers to examine the moral standards of government.

The object would be to neutralize at least in part the political effects of the Fulbright revelations of moral sleaziness in the Administration. These worry the Democratic leaders at least as much as the Kefauver revelations of the intimate connections between crime and the big city Democratic machines. But Attorney General McGrath opposed the commission idea. Truman himself heartily dislikes Senator Fulbright. And above all, Truman is still obsessed with the notion that his whole Administration is as pure as the driven snow. Thus nothing is likely to come of the proposal, at least as far as Truman is concerned.

Meanwhile, both investigations are likely to go on—and on and on—in one form or another. The Democratic leaders would of course dearly like to bring the horrid ordeal to an end. But the Republicans are not likely to vote to end investigations which they are unanimously convinced are crucifying the Democrats. And Democrats, whatever the Congressional leadership may wish, are far from eager to seem to vote in favor of sin.

Want Fulbright's Mantle

Thus, although Senator Kefauver himself will no doubt bow out, some sort of crime investigation will be going on for months. As for the Fulbright investigations, a jurisdictional battle between two Senate committees, to decide which one is to inherit Senator Fulbright's mantle, is already in prospect. Senator Clyde Hoey, chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Expenditures, wants to carry on where Fulbright left off, by investigating the defunct Maritime Commission. So does Senator Edwin Johnson, Chairman of the Commerce Committee.

This eagerness to take over is understandable, because the Maritime Commission has for a long time exuded a rich and peculiar odor. Another agency on the list of likely prospects is the Civil Aeronautics Board. If only a fraction of the rumors about political shenanigans in the CAB are true, this also should provide some very fruity probing. In this case, however, the Republicans may not be so eager for the fray, since a number of Republican Senators have been extraordinarily responsive to the desires of Pan-American Airways, whose remarkable political influence would certainly come under scrutiny.

At any rate, months of klieglighted, headline-catching investigations are now apparently inevitable. In many ways, this is a welcome prospect. The moral sleaziness which has been attacking the American political fabric needs holding up to the light. If President Truman continues to take the line that any man he has ever appointed to office is automatically the soul of honor, he will be committing political suicide, as his Congressional leaders are fully aware.

Country Will Survive

Even so, these investigations, past and future, should be viewed in their proper perspective. The fact is that the United States cannot be destroyed either by criminals with big city machine connections or by influence peddlers with friends in key agencies.

It seems to be a law of nature that a moral blight descends on this country after all its big wars. It is only necessary to look back to the Grant and Harding administrations, after the two other great wars which this country has fought, to see that this is so. Indeed, what has so far come to light seems all the more unappetizing because it has been by comparison so petty and unimaginative. In any case, in the end the country will survive its gamblers and influence peddlers, just as it survived its Albert Falls and Jim Fisks and Boss Tweeds.

Yet the survival of the nation is now nevertheless for the first time at stake. This is the fact which the klieg lights, the television, and the atmosphere of high drama which has surrounded the current investigations has served to obscure. There is no question but that the pleasurable excitement about gamblers and mink coats has contributed heavily to the sudden wave of complacency about the world crisis, of which Defense Secretary Marshall recently complained so bitterly. A spring and summer in which the attention of the country continued to be diverted from the problem posed by national survival to the problem posed by mink coats in the White House could be the prelude to disaster.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Sumner Welles Confesses

SUMNER Welles returns to public controversy after a prolonged illness attending the curious circumstances of his departure from the State Department. His resurrection is ushered in by a book, "Seven Decisions that Shaped History," and by the chairmanship of a letterhead organization "Freedom International."

The book is extraordinarily controversial, attacking Cordell Hull, Herbert Hoover, General George Marshall and about everybody else, except Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sumner Welles, who were never wrong. But as I read the book, I could not help recalling that Sumner Welles was in the State Department in extremely important positions from 1933 to 1943 and that he did not speak up at the time to alert the American people. He has waited until 1951 to tell us what we should have known when the mistakes were being made by his own State Department.

For instance, he says:

"In China the Nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek remained in power. There was good reason to assume that with the pledged support of the Soviet Union and of the United States it would gradually overcome the opposition of the Chinese Communists and consolidate its authority over a United Nation."

That, of course, is absolute nonsense and is written only to defend, by implication, the shameless conduct of Roosevelt at Teheran and Yalta. Welles knows that Chiang broke with the Communists in 1927 in such a manner that no peace between them could ever be possible.

Writing of Roosevelt's troubles with Chiank Kai-shek, Sumner Welles says:

". . .the repeated—and, it must be admitted, bungling—efforts of several of President Roosevelt's representatives in China to persuade Chiang Kai-shek to comply with the demands of the Chinese Communists were productive of misunderstanding, and damaged the prestige and authority of the Nationalist government.

"Likewise the profound ignorance of China, and the lack of Far Eastern experience, of certain of the President's representatives there served him in ill stead. These envoys spent much of their time quarrelling with each other, or with their subordinates; and, while I know of no instance where they did not try to carry out the President's instructions to further the establishment of a strong postwar China, their erroneous judgment and the wide diversity of their recommendations made it impossible for him to obtain any accurate over-all estimate of the situation."

This is important evidence and has often appeared, in one form or another, in this column, but from Sumner Welles, it is of greater value because he was running the State Department when many of the mistakes were made. And he gives no names, no facts, no details. Who are these advisers? Is one of them, perchance, Owen Lattimore or Lauchlin Currie?

Roosevelt, according to Welles, was not only confused by his advisers concerning his China policy, but by General George Marshall concerning the over-all war strategy, Marshall being, according to Welles, incorrect in his information and his decisions.

Welles does not give details as to who it is that made these mistakes. Are we still being governed by the men who were, in his opinion, all wrong? They have, to date, cost us 60,000 casualties. Are they still determining our policy? If you look at the dates, General George Marshall and Dean Acheson made the worst mistakes, but Sumner Welles does not say who advised them regarding Far Eastern affairs.

Again Sumner Welles, defending Roosevelt, says:

"At the Cairo conferences with the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, the President had at his side no expert adviser on Far Eastern affairs. At Yalta also such advice was lacking. If the President had had with him at those two conferences so authoritative and keen-minded an expert on Far Eastern affairs, for example, as Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, who had for many years been the State Department's political adviser on the Far East, a member of defects in the Cairo and Yalta agreements on Asia might well have been avoided."

This is a correct view but incomplete. Roosevelt did have advisers at Cairo and certainly at Yalta. General George Marshall was at Cairo as was General Wedemeyer. At Yalta, President Roosevelt's expert on Far Eastern affairs was Alger Hiss.

What we need to know from Sumner Welles is, who confused President Roosevelt, who appointed the quarrelsome, contending people who gave him, as Welles says, bad advice? We want names. We want responsibility. Who appointed Hiss? Now that Sumner Welles has written this confession, let him come clean.

The Merry-Go-Round

have to shut down, the committee was informed by Manly Fleischmann, chief of the National Production Authority.

"The only solution is getting these little companies a larger share of defense orders," declared Fleischmann. "We hope to work that out."

Forthright Congressman Clinton McKinnon of California remarked that he would be more inclined to believe that the NPA really wanted to help small business if the agency had shown more inclination in the past.

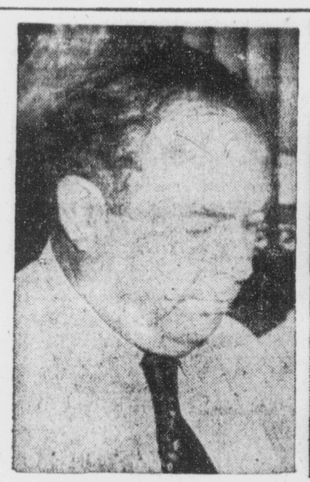

"Your order cutting back the nondefense uses of aluminum by 35 per cent was unfair to the little fellow, because he couldn't afford to take the same horizontal cut as a bigger manufacturer," said McKinnon. "It would have been fairer if you had used a sliding-scale cutback to protect small firms, as we did when rationing newsprint during the last war."

"There's an argument for both sides," replied Fleischmann. "We thought our way was the best and quickest method of getting aluminum for the defense stockpile."

Military procurement spokesmen and a witness from the General Services Agency, however, reassured the committee that little business would come in for some gravy after the current emergency—if it can hold out that long. After the last war, the committee was told, between 75 and 80 per cent of surplus war assets were merchandised by small firms.

"Well, I've heard about everything now," exploded Confressman Joe Evins of Tennessee. "In other words, you propose to starve little business now and then try to revive it following the emergency — after it's already dead."

Maple Pageant To Feature Many Cultural Contributions

German-Born Artist To Play At Festival

MEYERSDALE, Pa.—The forth episode of the historical pageant of the fourth annual Somerset County Maple Festival, April 13, 14, and 15, concerns the rich heritage in the arts which various nationality groups in the county have contributed to the culture of the nation.

Featured soloist of this episode will be Hans Stumpf, 25-year-old German-born accordionist, now a resident of Somerset. Mr. Stumpf will play "Tarantella Variations," "Musette Waltz," and "Poinciana." His career as an accordionist began when he purchased his first accordion at the age of 14.

Several years later the young musician was at Leipzig Conservatory where he began the study of organ. He was called from his studies there to enter the service of the German navy.

His greatest friend during those days in the service and the two years he was a prisoner of war, was his accordion. Just as it had gotten him excused from navy detail, so did it permit him to leave the confines of a prisoner camp at Chartres, France, to play for the French people in Paris.

Aided By Red Cross

The American Red Cross club at Wiesbaden, Germany, was his first paid musical job. Hans taught piano and accordion, although he knew no English, and he soon came into demand as a soloist.

He lost his job in the summer of 1947 when the club was turned over to Army Special Services. Barred from any further employment with the army air force in Wiesbaden because a U. S. Army officer reported that he was "dating" the club director, Miss Peggy Reiley of Somerset, he went to Frankfurt. There he helped organize a combo whose style was so modern that it soon became featured over Radio Frankfurt, and in German and U. S. Army clubs.

During 1948 and 1949 he played engagements in the Frankfurt and Stuttgart vicinities. Along with the combo, known as the Gibaks, he made numerous recordings for Radio Stuttgart and Radio Frankfurt.

Master Accordionist

Following his marriage to his Red Cross sweetheart in Stuttgart, February 14, 1950, he went to Bad Homburg, Germany, where the combo played at the internationally famous tennis club. He and his wife left for the United States in early autumn.

Hans Stumpf is famous not only as member of the Gibaks, but as a musician in his own right. He has composed several pieces, done arranging and has made solo recordings for Radio Frankfurt. In recognition of his performance, he was given the rating of "master accordionist" by the H. M. Hohner Company in 1949. At the time of his departure from Germany, he was considered one of the finest accordionists in Western Germany.

advisers at Cairo and certainly at Yalta. General George Marshall was at Cairo as was General Wedemeyer. At Yalta, President Roosevelt's expert on Far Eastern affairs was Alger Hiss.

What we need to know from Sumner Welles is, who confused President Roosevelt, who appointed the quarrelsome, contending people who gave him, as Welles says, bad advice? We want names. We want responsibility. Who appointed Hiss? Now that Sumner Welles has written this confession, let him come clean.

have to shut down, the committee was informed by Manly Fleischmann, chief of the National Production Authority.

"The only solution is getting these little companies a larger share of defense orders," declared Fleischmann. "We hope to work that out."

Forthright Congressman Clinton McKinnon of California remarked that he would be more inclined to believe that the NPA really wanted to help small business if the agency had shown more inclination in the past.

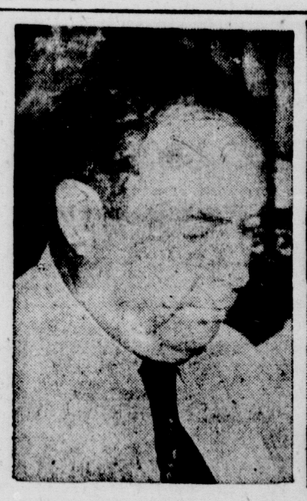

"Your order cutting back the nondefense uses of aluminum by 35 per cent was unfair to the little fellow, because he couldn't afford to take the same horizontal cut as a bigger manufacturer," said McKinnon. "It would have been fairer if you had used a sliding-scale cutback to protect small firms, as we did when rationing newsprint during the last war."

"There's an argument for both sides," replied Fleischmann. "We thought our way was the best and quickest method of getting aluminum for the defense stockpile."

Military procurement spokesmen and a witness from the General Services Agency, however, reassured the committee that little business would come in for some gravy after the current emergency—if it can hold out that long. After the last war, the committee was told, between 75 and 80 per cent of surplus war assets were merchandised by small firms.

"Well, I've heard about everything now," exploded Confressman Joe Evins of Tennessee. "In other words, you propose to starve little business now and then try to revive it following the emergency — after it's already dead."

Maple Pageant To Feature Many Cultural Contributions

German-Born Artist To Play At Festival

MEYERSDALE, Pa.—The forth episode of the historical pageant of the fourth annual Somerset County Maple Festival, April 13, 14, and 15, concerns the rich heritage in the arts which various nationality groups in the county have contributed to the culture of the nation.

Featured soloist of this episode will be Hans Stumpf, 25-year-old German-born accordionist, now a resident of Somerset. Mr. Stumpf will play "Tarantella Variations," "Musette Waltz," and "Poinciana." His career as an accordionist began when he purchased his first accordion at the age of 14.

Several years later the young musician was at Leipzig Conservatory where he began the study of organ. He was called from his studies there to enter the service of the German navy.

His greatest friend during those days in the service and the two years he was a prisoner of war, was his accordion. Just as it had gotten him excused from navy detail, so did it permit him to leave the confines of a prisoner camp at Chartres, France, to play for the French people in Paris.

Aided By Red Cross

The American Red Cross club at Wiesbaden, Germany, was his first paid musical job. Hans taught piano and accordion, although he knew no English, and he soon came into demand as a soloist.

He lost his job in the summer of 1947 when the club was turned over to Army Special Services. Barred from any further employment with the army air force in Wiesbaden because a U. S. Army officer reported that he was "dating" the club director, Miss Peggy Reiley of Somerset, he went to Frankfurt. There he helped organize a combo whose style was so modern that it soon became featured over Radio Frankfurt, and in German and U. S. Army clubs.

During 1948 and 1949 he played engagements in the Frankfurt and Stuttgart vicinities. Along with the combo, known as the Gibaks, he made numerous recordings for Radio Stuttgart and Radio Frankfurt.

Master Accordionist

Following his marriage to his Red Cross sweetheart in Stuttgart, February 14, 1950, he went to Bad Homburg, Germany, where the combo played at the internationally famous tennis club. He and his wife left for the United States in early autumn.

Hans Stumpf is famous not only as member of the Gibaks, but as a musician in his own right. He has composed several pieces, done arranging and has made solo recordings for Radio Frankfurt. In recognition of his performance, he was given the rating of "master accordionist" by the H. M. Hohner Company in 1949. At the time of his departure from Germany, he was considered one of the finest accordionists in Western Germany.

advisers at Cairo and certainly at Yalta. General George Marshall was at Cairo as was General Wedemeyer. At Yalta, President Roosevelt's expert on Far Eastern affairs was Alger Hiss.

What we need to know from Sumner Welles is, who confused President Roosevelt, who appointed the quarrelsome, contending people who gave him, as Welles says, bad advice? We want names. We want responsibility. Who appointed Hiss? Now that Sumner Welles has written this confession, let him come clean.

The Merry-Go-Round

have to shut down, the committee was informed by Manly Fleischmann, chief of the National Production Authority.

"The only solution is getting these little companies a larger share of defense orders," declared Fleischmann. "We hope to work that out."

Forthright Congressman Clinton McKinnon of California remarked that he would be more inclined to believe that the NPA really wanted to help small business if the agency had shown more inclination in the past.

"Your order cutting back the nondefense uses of aluminum by 35 per cent was unfair to the little fellow, because he couldn't afford to take the same horizontal cut as a bigger manufacturer," said McKinnon. "It would have been fairer if you had used a sliding-scale cutback to protect small firms, as we did when rationing newsprint during the last war."

"There's an argument for both sides," replied Fleischmann. "We thought our way was the best and quickest method of getting aluminum for the defense stockpile."

Military procurement spokesmen and a witness from the General Services Agency, however, reassured the committee that little business would come in for some gravy after the current emergency—if it can hold out that long. After the last war, the committee was told, between 75 and 80 per cent of surplus war assets were merchandised by small firms.

"Well, I've heard about everything now," exploded Confressman Joe Evins of Tennessee. "In other words, you propose to starve little business now and then try to revive it following the emergency — after it's already dead."

Maple Pageant To Feature Many Cultural Contributions

German-Born Artist To Play At Festival

MEYERSDALE, Pa.—The forth episode of the historical pageant of the fourth annual Somerset County Maple Festival, April 13, 14, and 15, concerns the rich heritage in the arts which various nationality groups in the county have contributed to the culture of the nation.

Featured soloist of this episode will be Hans Stumpf, 25-year-old German-born accordionist, now a resident of Somerset. Mr. Stumpf will play "Tarantella Variations," "Musette Waltz," and "Poinciana." His career as an accordionist began when he purchased his first accordion at the age of 14.

Several years later the young musician was at Leipzig Conservatory where he began the study of organ. He was called from his studies there to enter the service of the German navy.

His greatest friend during those days in the service and the two years he was a prisoner of war, was his accordion. Just as it had gotten him excused from navy detail, so did it permit him to leave the confines of a prisoner camp at Chartres, France, to play for the French people in Paris.

Aided By Red Cross

The American Red Cross club at Wiesbaden, Germany, was his first paid musical job. Hans taught piano and accordion, although he knew no English, and he soon came into demand as a soloist.

He lost his job in the summer of 1947 when the club was turned over to Army Special Services. Barred from any further employment with the army air force in Wiesbaden because a U. S. Army officer reported that he was "dating" the club director, Miss Peggy Reiley of Somerset, he went to Frankfurt. There he helped organize a combo whose style was so modern that it soon became featured over Radio Frankfurt, and in German and U. S. Army clubs.

During 1948 and 1949 he played engagements in the Frankfurt and Stuttgart vicinities. Along with the combo, known as the Gibaks, he made numerous recordings for Radio Stuttgart and Radio Frankfurt.

Master Accordionist

Following his marriage to his Red Cross sweetheart in Stuttgart, February 14, 1950, he went to Bad Homburg, Germany, where the combo played at the internationally famous tennis club. He and his wife left for the United States in early autumn.

Hans Stumpf is famous not only as member of the Gibaks, but as a musician in his own right. He has composed several pieces, done arranging and has made solo recordings for Radio Frankfurt. In recognition of his performance, he was given the rating of "master accordionist" by the H. M. Hohner Company in 1949. At the time of his departure from Germany, he was considered one of the finest accordionists in Western Germany.

Western Maryland Coal Mines Seen As Possible Air Raid Shelters In Civil Defense Program

A recent survey conducted in cooperation with the Maryland Bureau of Mines indicates many vantage points in the George's Creek area which could be used for air raid shelters in the event of enemy bombing. A possible place for storage of valuable state and county records was also found. Shown above is an overall picture of the Bureau's findings. In picture No. 1 is Franklin Mine No. 3 of the George's Creek Coal Company at Click's Crossing in the northern section of Lonaconing along Route 36. Picture No. 2 shows Tyson Mine No. 10 of the Consolidated Fuel Company at Eckhart. Frank C. Powers, Frostburg, chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, is seen pointing to steel timbers and concrete roofing which supports the opening for a distance of over 100 feet. District Mine Inspector Edward A. Stowell and his son Jack Stowell are also in the picture. Picture No. 3 is a photo of an underpass recently built under the newly relocated Route 40. It is in the Frog Hollow section of Eckhart and according to Powers has double openings measuring six by six feet and 300 feet in length each. Powers said either opening could be sealed at the ends to make a repository for records. No. 4 is a photo of the Mecaneck Mine near Click's Crossing in the northern part of Lonaconing. The mine is operated by Eckhart Brothers of Eckhart. No. 5 shows the northern section of Lonaconing from the hillside in the rear of St. Peter's Episcopal Church at a point where there are two openings on George's Creek Coal Company property known as Meek Mines. Now abandoned, they are in easy access from the north section of Lonaconing. This composite picture shows only a few of the 30 or more mines in Western Maryland which could be used as shelters in an emergency.

Area Mines Viewed As Excellent Shelters Against Aerial Attack

Mine Inspectors Cite Possibilities

Would you have any idea of a safe place to go should this area be subject to enemy attack through effective bombing?

A recent survey conducted in cooperation with the Maryland Bureau of Mines indicates that many such vantage points exist along the George's Creek section of Western Maryland.

The purpose of the survey was to learn the number of suitable places, their location and accessability to the public. How many persons can live comfortably in any one section, the safety of these places and steps necessary to convert them into habitable areas are all problems which must be overcome.

Not only have personnel been taken into consideration but also the storage of valuable records and legal papers. Various county documents and papers including birth certificates, marriage licenses, deeds, wills as well as court records kept at the County Court House could be handled and retained in a permanent place of safe keeping.

Considered In World War II

Plans of using these mentioned places was considered during World War II and now with the nation wide Civil Defense plan going into high gear these locations were sought out and analyzed.

Statistics from the Maryland Bureau of Mines show that in the immediate area there are thirty-one mines, some abandoned. Eight are located in Lonaconing, four in Midland, three in Midlothian, eight in Frostburg, four in Mt. Savage and four in Barrelville.

True, one will reason that the interior of a mine is damp with temperatures varying with the seasons. This has been taken into consideration and the measures to cope with the problem is to be worked out.

Accessible From North

In the rear of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Lonaconing there are two openings in the hillside belonging to Georges Creek Coal Company. Known as the Meek Mine opening the abandoned mines are in easy access from the north section of town.

The Mecaneck Mine, near Click's Crossing, in the northern section of Lonaconing would be of no value as a shelter for older residents since it is located higher on the hillside than most mines. The property belongs to Georges Creek Coal Company and is at present being operated by Eckhart Brothers of Eckhart.

An excellent place where records could be stored is located on Route 40. An underpass is in the Frog Hollow section of Eckhart and according to Frank Powers, chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines it would provide a splendid repository for valuable papers. The underpass has two double openings and either pass is sufficient to carry any flow of water in that section. Each opening measures 6 by 6 feet and 300 feet in length and could be waterproofed and sealed at the ends.

Reached In Minutes

A mine opening which could be reached in a matter of minutes is Franklin Mine No. 3 of the Georges Creek Coal Company at Click's crossing in the northern section of Lonaconing along Route 36.

The most substantial shelter of the area is located at Eckhart, Tyson Mine No. 10 of Consolidated Fuel Company is protected by steel timbers and concrete for a distance inside of over 100 feet.

Mine Bureau Chief Powers claims that one of the best shelters is a mine known as No. 9 of the Consolidated Fuel Company, located half way between the two Western Maryland depots in Frostburg. This place was investigated by the Department of Records of Maryland during World War II as a possible storehouse for state records, Powers added.

A borehole, situated near the main Consolidated Fuel Company office in Frostburg leading from the surface down to this mine, would permit the installation of electric power lines. This mine is one of the most ideal shelters in the entire region and one that few residents know about.

Western Maryland Coal Mines Seen As Possible Air Raid Shelters In Civil Defense Program

A recent survey conducted in cooperation with the Maryland Bureau of Mines indicates many vantage points in the George's Creek area which could be used for air raid shelters in the event of enemy bombing. A possible place for storage of valuable state and county records was also found. Shown above is an overall picture of the Bureau's findings. In picture No. 1 is Franklin Mine No. 3 of the George's Creek Coal Company at Click's Crossing in the northern section of Lonaconing along Route 36. Picture No. 2 shows Tyson Mine No. 10 of the Consolidated Fuel Company at Eckhart. Frank C. Powers, Frostburg, chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, is seen pointing to steel timbers and concrete roofing which supports the opening for a distance of over 100 feet. District Mine Inspector Edward A. Stowell and his son Jack Stowell are also in the picture. Picture No. 3 is a photo of an underpass recently built under the newly relocated Route 40. It is in the Frog Hollow section of Eckhart and according to Powers has double openings measuring six by six feet and 300 feet in length each. Powers said either opening could be sealed at the ends to make a repository for records. No. 4 is a photo of the Mecaneck Mine near Click's Crossing in the northern part of Lonaconing. The mine is operated by Eckhart Brothers of Eckhart. No. 5 shows the northern section of Lonaconing from the hillside in the rear of St. Peter's Episcopal Church at a point where there are two openings on George's Creek Coal Company property known as Meek Mines. Now abandoned, they are in easy access from the north section of Lonaconing. This composite picture shows only a few of the 30 or more mines in Western Maryland which could be used as shelters in an emergency.

Area Mines Viewed As Excellent Shelters Against Aerial Attack

Mine Inspectors Cite Possibilities

Would you have any idea of a safe place to go should this area be subject to enemy attack through effective bombing?

A recent survey conducted in cooperation with the Maryland Bureau of Mines indicates that many such vantage points exist along the George's Creek section of Western Maryland.

The purpose of the survey was to learn the number of suitable places, their location and accessability to the public. How many persons can live comfortably in any one section, the safety of these places and steps necessary to convert them into habitable areas are all problems which must be overcome.

Not only have personnel been taken into consideration but also the storage of valuable records and legal papers. Various county documents and papers including birth certificates, marriage licenses, deeds, wills as well as court records kept at the County Court House could be handled and retained in a permanent place of safe keeping.

Considered In World War II

Plans of using these mentioned places was considered during World War II and now with the nation wide Civil Defense plan going into high gear these locations were sought out and analyzed.

Statistics from the Maryland Bureau of Mines show that in the immediate area there are thirty-one mines, some abandoned. Eight are located in Lonaconing, four in Midland, three in Midlothian, eight in Frostburg, four in Mt. Savage and four in Barrelville.

True, one will reason that the interior of a mine is damp with temperatures varying with the seasons. This has been taken into consideration and the measures to cope with the problem is to be worked out.

Accessible From North

In the rear of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Lonaconing there are two openings in the hillside belonging to Georges Creek Coal Company. Known as the Meek Mine opening the abandoned mines are in easy access from the north section of town.

The Mecaneck Mine, near Click's Crossing, in the northern section of Lonaconing would be of no value as a shelter for older residents since it is located higher on the hillside than most mines. The property belongs to Georges Creek Coal Company and is at present being operated by Eckhart Brothers of Eckhart.

An excellent place where records could be stored is located on Route 40. An underpass is in the Frog Hollow section of Eckhart and according to Frank Powers, chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines it would provide a splendid repository for valuable papers. The underpass has two double openings and either pass is sufficient to carry any flow of water in that section. Each opening measures 6 by 6 feet and 300 feet in length and could be waterproofed and sealed at the ends.

Reached In Minutes

A mine opening which could be reached in a matter of minutes is Franklin Mine No. 3 of the Georges Creek Coal Company at Click's crossing in the northern section of Lonaconing along Route 36.

The most substantial shelter of the area is located at Eckhart. Tyson Mine No. 10 of Consolidated Fuel Company is protected by steel timbers and concrete for a distance inside of over 100 feet.

Mine Bureau Chief Powers claims that one of the best shelters is a mine known as No. 9 of the Consolidated Fuel Company, located half way between the two Western Maryland depots in Frostburg. This place was investigated by the Department of Records of Maryland during World War II as a possible storehouse for state records, Powers added.

A borehole, situated near the main Consolidated Fuel Company office in Frostburg leading from the surface down to this mine, would permit the installation of electric power lines. This mine is one of the most ideal shelters in the entire region and one that few residents know about.

Coach Rupp Presents Gold Wrist Watch, 200 Attend Dinner

Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior forward, won the twelfth Cumberland Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award at the dinner marking the annual event of Cumberland Council No. 586 last night at the K. of C. Home.

Connolly, who is employed as a mailer by the Times and Alleganian Company and works after school hours, was a nominee for the second straight year and was adjudged the winner over seven other candidates from four Greater Cumberland schools.

Announcement that Connolly was the 1951 winner was made in the presence of 200 persons by John A. Jones, chairman of the selection committee. The blond Connolly is the fourth LaSalle player to earn the award. He was preceded by Bobby Stakem in 1941, Francis Shaffer in 1943 and Ed Gunning in 1945.

Rupp Presents Watch

The engraved gold wrist watch which goes to the winner each year was presented to Connolly by Adolph F. Rupp, coach of the University of Kentucky's national basketball champions of the 1950-51 season, who was the principal speaker.

Other nominees for the award were presented miniature gold basketballs by "Scotty" Hamilton, head basketball coach at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. The recipients were: Schley Lyons and Ronnie Cage, of Fort Hill High's W.M.I. League champions; Frank Phares and Ronald Sisk, Allegany High; Carl Hartman and Bill Phillips, Ridgeley High, and James Moran, LaSalle.

Carpenti Welcomes Guests

Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council, delivered the address of welcome and stated that the K. of C. Sportsmanship Award is dedicated to the late Francis J. "Frank" McMullen and John "Jack" Stakem, former Casey players, and was originated by the Casey Club and later taken over by the K. of C.

Past Winners Send Congrats

Four other past winners, namely, John Vernall, Ed Gunning, James H. Radcliffe, Donald F. Whiteman and Paul Lindsay were unable to be present but sent congratulatory letters and telegrams to the athlete chosen for the award.

Carpenti also introduced members of the committee on arrangements—John J. Creegan, chairman; Dr. John K. Rozum, Joseph Love, Floyd Jenkins, Alexander Schute, Victor Pascoe and Warren F. Chapman.

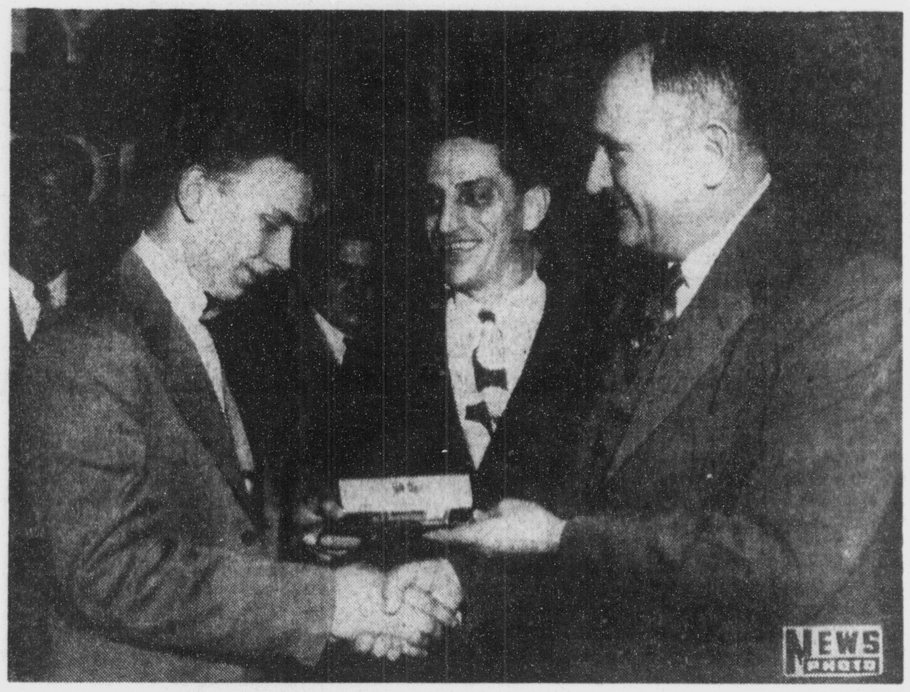

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, who acted as toastmaster, was introduced by Carpenti, and welcomed the main speaker, Coach Adolph Rupp.

Coaches Make Remarks

Preceding Mr. Rupp on the speaking program were Ralph Poling, Ridgeley High mentor; Art Slocum, of LaSalle High School; Walter L. Bowers, of Allegany and John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh, Fort Hill, and Rev. Regis Larkin, coach of St. Michael's championship teams, all of whom spoke briefly. It was pointed out that St. Michael's Frostburg Church League and K. of C. Youth League champions had won 50 of 52 contests during the 1950-51 season.

The concluding talks were given by "Scotty" Hamilton, Generals' mentor, and John Thomas, coach of Barton High School's Class "C" Maryland champions of 1951.

The invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. Father Larkin in the absence of the Very Rev. J. Lawrence Kilkenny, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, who was called out of town.

COACH RUPP CONGRATULATES WINNER — Coach Adolph F. Rupp, right, of the University of Kentucky's national collegiate basketball champions, is shown congratulating Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior, after the latter had been presented a gold engraved wrist watch — the K. of C.'s 12th annual Sportsmanship Award — last night. Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council 586, donor of the award is shown looking on.

THEY WERE NOMINEES FOR AWARD — Here are the eight nominees for the 12th annual Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award shown seated about the table at the dinner held last night at the K. of C. Home. The basketball players of the four Greater Cumberland Schools shown clockwise are: Ronnie Sisk, Allegany; Ronnie Cage, Fort Hill; Frank Phares, Allegany; Schley Lyons, Fort Hill; Carl Hartman, Ridgeley; Bill Phillips, Ridgeley; Douglas Connolly, LaSalle, the winner, and James Moran, LaSalle. Rupp Prescribes Olympics Yearly As World Tonic

Gunter Makes Hit As Toastmaster

Olympic Games held annually would tear down international barriers and would do more good than all the ministers and ambassadors to Europe in the next 1,000 years.

Such was the opinion expressed by Adolph F. Rupp, noted coach of the University of Kentucky's championship basketball teams, who occupied the role of principal speaker at the Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award Dinner last night at the K. of C. Home.

Mr. Rupp, who was introduced by Toastmaster William A. Gunter as —The Man In The Brown Suit—Mr. Basketball—The Baron of Basketball and Old Rupp and Ready, reviewed the progress of many of his great quints at the Lexington school, and dwelt at length on the Olympic Games of 1928 when his "kids" won international fame.

The native Kansan, whose Kentucky teams won 410 games and lost 77 in 20 seasons and copped three national titles, told of the trials and tribulations of a college cage coach in his lengthy an inspiring talk.

Basketball Takes Beating

"Basketball this year has taken a beating due to the scandal that has reared its ugly head," Rupp declared, "yet there are millions who have been born in poverty, spent lives in poverty, died in poverty—still they were honest."

In his talk in regard to the Olmpics of 1948, Rupp told of the Czechoslovakian coach and athletes who refused to return to their homeland and live behind the "Iron Curtain." They are now in the United States seeking citizenship papers, he added.

"There's something wrong back there," the speaker declared. "There is plenty of talk about universal brotherhood but we're not doing anything about it."

Gunter Scores Hit

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, played the role of toastmaster in his inimitable way and had 'em rolling in the aisles with his funny stories and witty remarks. Gunter was introduced as the originator of the "Bigga Da Lou Stories" by Grand Knight Peter J. Carpenti.

The toastmaster caused quite a chuckle when he addressed the gathering of 200 with "Mr. chairman and fellow Republicans," and then told his audience that in the recent election he didn't "run for attorney general of Maryland, I just walked." He guaranteed those present the proceedings would be over on the same day they started.

The affair lasted about three hours.

ORIOLES TRIM A'S, 7-2

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., April 1 (AP)—Six unearned runs helped the Baltimore Orioles of the International League to a 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today.

A wind-blown homer by Bill Glynn over the right field wall in the sixth inning was the only untainted run made by the winners.

Righthander Ernie Groth allowed the American Leaguers their two runs in the first six innings. One was a home run clout by Elmer Valo in the sixth. Joe Payne shut out the Mackmen in the last three innings without a safety.

The A's fielded a patched up lineup because a mild epidemic of flu has downed a good part of the squad. Score:

RED SOX SWAMP TIGERS

SARASOTA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill unfurled his newly planned "Fenway Park lineup" today and the Sockers promptly swamped Detroit, 8-1, with a 14-hit attack including homers by Walt Dropo and Rookie Fred Hatfield.

O'Neill started Junior Stephens—last year's regular shortstop — at third base and put Veteran Lou Boudreau at short. Johnny Pesky, regular third sacker, later spelled Starter Bobby Doerr at second. The Sox boss said Pesky will be at third on the road, however.

Dropo, returning to action after being sidelined with a pulled side muscle, walloped a terrific homer. Billy Goodman in right field awatted three safeties in four trips and Doerr had a perfect three for three day at bat.

Starter Bill Hoeft, Tigers' rookie lefthander who had impressed in two prior starts, gave up eight hits and six runs in his three innings. Boston's Ray Scarborough blanked the Detroiters for six innings but lost his shutout in the seventh when Vic Wertz tripled and later scored. Score:

REDS BLANK PHILS, 2-0

TAMPA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Big Ted Kluszewski boomed a 400-foot home run over the right field fence in the last of the ninth today to break up a brilliant pitching duel and give the Cincinnati Reds a 2 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Phils.

Joe Adcock, who had singled, was on base when Kluszewski unloaded his game-winning blow.

Until that blast, it had been a pitcher's game all the way. Ewell Blackwell, who went seven innings, and Ken Raffensberger allowed the Phils only four hits, one a double by Granny Hamner.

Rookie John Thompson and Russ Meyer allowed only five hits, Kluszewski's wallop came off Meyer and it was one of three safe blows the big first sacker got. The game today was the last of spring training here. Score:

DODGERS WIN IN 11TH

MIAMI, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Hank Edwards' pinch single scoring Peewee Reese from second gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-3 victory over the Boston Braves in the 11th inning before 3,500 fans here today.

It was the fourth extra-inning game played by the Brooks in their last five games.

Edwards, operating under a Montreal contract but assured of a new major league chance with the Dodgers, smacked George Estock's first pitch into right field for a clean hit after Bruce Edwards had sacrificed Reese to second. Score:

Mangrum Wins Azalea Open By Single Stroke

Lloyd Earns $2,000, Three Tied For 2nd

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 1 (AP) — Lloyd Mangrum, veteran Chicago professional, won the $10,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament by one stroke today, shooting a closing 72 for 281.

He had to sweat out a 45-minute rules committee meeting over a possible rules infraction before he pocketed the $2,000 winner's check that shot him back into the top as the No. 1 money winner of the year.

A question arose shortly after Mangrum completed his round whether he had played with 15 clubs. One over the limit allowed by golfing rules.

As he said while the committee was deliberating, "I was putting so badly on the front nine, (he took a 38), that I planned to change putters, but somebody called my attention to the fact that I couldn't do that so I kept the old one."

Had Mangrum been found guilty of rules violation he could have been disqualified, but by unanimous deeision the committee decided there was no infraction.

Three Tied For 2nd

Tied for second, a stroke back of Mangrum with 282, were professionals Jimmy Turnesa, Briarcliff, N. Y.; Jimmy Ferrier, San Francisco, and Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich.

Earl Stewart, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, the leader by a stroke at the start of the final round, shot a 75 today and finished with a 283 total landing in a three-way tie for fifth.

Turnesa, Ferrier and Furgol each received $1,066.66. Furgol clinched a berth in the Augusta Masters opening Thursday with his performance. They were only one stroke ahead of three other pros who had 283. Otto Greiner, Baltimore; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., winner here two years ago, and Stewart each took $606.66 for tying for fifth place.

The tournament's finish was one of the tightest in recent PGA history, with 10 players blanketed by three strokes going into the last nine holes.

Lloyd 7-Under Par

Mangrum, who scored rounds of 69-72-68-72, was seven under par for the 6,652-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. He began the day in second place, a stroke back of Stewart, the red-headed young Texas pro. Playing in different threesomes, each was out in two-over 38, but Mangrum steadied on the way in to clinch his third big one of the year.

Low amateur was Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, B. C., with 71 today for 293. He was two strokes ahead of Harvie Ward, Southern Pines, N. C. and Bill Stalls, Greenville, N. C.

We like the crack credited to the old Chippewa—67-year-old Charles Albert (Chief) Bender, now coach of the Philadelphia A's.

"I read in the papers that the army is getting its infantryman out of jeeps and making them walk," Bender said.

"Well, we ought to get these pitchers out of roadsters, too. That's what I'm doing."

Bender, who managed Johnstown in the Middle Atlantic League in 1927 when Cumberland won its first championship, declares present day pitchers are babied too much.

"We used to pitch a game and work out in batting practice the next day," the Chief asserted. "But here lately, a pitcher thinks he needs to sit down for two days after he's been in a game."

Of course, Bender was not referring to Jim Konstanty. The Phillies didn't let him sit down last season.

Douglas Connolly Of LaSalle Wins Sportsmanship Award

Explorer Ace 12th To Earn K. Of C. Prize

Coach Rupp Presents Gold Wrist Watch, 200 Attend Dinner

Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior forward, won the twelfth Cumberland Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award at the dinner marking the annual event of Cumberland Council No. 586 last night at the K. of C. Home.

Connolly, who is employed as a mailer by the Times and Alleganian Company and works after school hours, was a nominee for the second straight year and was adjudged the winner over seven other candidates from four Greater Cumberland schools.

Announcement that Connolly was the 1951 winner was made in the presence of 200 persons by John A. Jones, chairman of the selection committee. The blond Connolly is the fourth LaSalle player to earn the award. He was preceded by Bobby Stakem in 1941, Francis Shaffer in 1943 and Ed Gunning in 1945.

Rupp Presents Watch

The engraved gold wrist watch which goes to the winner each year was presented to Connolly by Adolph F. Rupp, coach of the University of Kentucky's national basketball champions of the 1950-51 season, who was the principal speaker.

Other nominees for the award were presented miniature gold basketballs by "Scotty" Hamilton, head basketball coach at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. The recipients were: Schley Lyons and Ronnie Cage, of Fort Hill High's W.M.I. League champions; Frank Phares and Ronald Sisk, Allegany High; Carl Hartman and Bill Phillips, Ridgeley High, and James Moran, LaSalle.

Carpenti Welcomes Guests

Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council, delivered the address of welcome and stated that the K. of C. Sportsmanship Award is dedicated to the late Francis J. "Frank" McMullen and John "Jack" Stakem, former Casey players, and was originated by the Casey Club and later taken over by the K. of C.

Past Winners Send Congrats

Four other past winners, namely, John Vernall, Ed Gunning, James H. Radcliffe, Donald F. Whiteman and Paul Lindsay were unable to be present but sent congratulatory letters and telegrams to the athlete chosen for the award.

Carpenti also introduced members of the committee on arrangements—John J. Creegan, chairman; Dr. John K. Rozum, Joseph Love, Floyd Jenkins, Alexander Schute, Victor Pascoe and Warren F. Chapman.

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, who acted as toastmaster, was introduced by Carpenti, and welcomed the main speaker, Coach Adolph Rupp.

Coaches Make Remarks

Preceding Mr. Rupp on the speaking program were Ralph Poling, Ridgeley High mentor; Art Slocum, of LaSalle High School; Walter L. Bowers, of Allegany and John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh, Fort Hill, and Rev. Regis Larkin, coach of St. Michael's championship teams, all of whom spoke briefly. It was pointed out that St. Michael's Frostburg Church League and K. of C. Youth League champions had won 50 of 52 contests during the 1950-51 season.

The concluding talks were given by "Scotty" Hamilton, Generals' mentor, and John Thomas, coach of Barton High School's Class "C" Maryland champions of 1951.

The invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. Father Larkin in the absence of the Very Rev. J. Lawrence Kilkenny, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, who was called out of town.

COACH RUPP CONGRATULATES WINNER — Coach Adolph F. Rupp, right, of the University of Kentucky's national collegiate basketball champions, is shown congratulating Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior, after the latter had been presented a gold engraved wrist watch — the K. of C.'s 12th annual Sportsmanship Award — last night. Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council 586, donor of the award is shown looking on.

THEY WERE NOMINEES FOR AWARD — Here are the eight nominees for the 12th annual Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award shown seated about the table at the dinner held last night at the K. of C. Home. The basketball players of the four Greater Cumberland Schools shown clockwise are: Ronnie Sisk, Allegany; Ronnie Cage, Fort Hill; Frank Phares, Allegany; Schley Lyons, Fort Hill; Carl Hartman, Ridgeley; Bill Phillips, Ridgeley; Douglas Connolly, LaSalle, the winner, and James Moran, LaSalle. Miniature gold basketballs went to all but the winner.

Rupp Prescribes Olympics Yearly As World Tonic

Gunter Makes Hit As Toastmaster

Olympic Games held annually would tear down international barriers and would do more good than all the ministers and ambassadors to Europe in the next 1,000 years.

Such was the opinion expressed by Adolph F. Rupp, noted coach of the University of Kentucky's championship basketball teams, who occupied the role of principal speaker at the Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award Dinner last night at the K. of C. Home.

Mr. Rupp, who was introduced by Toastmaster William A. Gunter as —The Man In The Brown Suit—Mr. Basketball—The Baron of Basketball and Old Rupp and Ready, reviewed the progress of many of his great quints at the Lexington school, and dwelt at length on the Olympic Games of 1928 when his "kids" won international fame.

The native Kansan, whose Kentucky teams won 410 games and lost 77 in 20 seasons and copped three national titles, told of the trials and tribulations of a college cage coach in his lengthy an inspiring talk.

Basketball Takes Beating

"Basketball this year has taken a beating due to the scandal that has reared its ugly head," Rupp declared, "yet there are millions who have been born in poverty, spent lives in poverty, died in poverty—still they were honest."

In his talk in regard to the Olmpics of 1948, Rupp told of the Czechoslovakian coach and athletes who refused to return to their homeland and live behind the "Iron Curtain." They are now in the United States seeking citizenship papers, he added.

"There's something wrong back there," the speaker declared. "There is plenty of talk about universal brotherhood but we're not doing anything about it."

Gunter Scores Hit

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, played the role of toastmaster in his inimitable way and had 'em rolling in the aisles with his funny stories and witty remarks. Gunter was introduced as the originator of the "Bigga Da Lou Stories" by Grand Knight Peter J. Carpenti.

The toastmaster caused quite a chuckle when he addressed the gathering of 200 with "Mr. chairman and fellow Republicans," and then told his audience that in the recent election he didn't "run for attorney general of Maryland, I just walked." He guaranteed those present the proceedings would be over on the same day they started.

The affair lasted about three hours.

Righthander Ernie Groth allowed the American Leaguers their two runs in the first six innings. One was a home run clout by Elmer Valo in the sixth. Joe Payne shut out the Mackmen in the last three innings without a safety.

RED SOX SWAMP TIGERS

SARASOTA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill unfurled his newly planned "Fenway Park lineup" today and the Sockers promptly swamped Detroit, 8-1, with a 14-hit attack including homers by Walt Dropo and Rookie Fred Hatfield.

O'Neill started Junior Stephens—last year's regular shortstop — at third base and put Veteran Lou Boudreau at short. Johnny Pesky, regular third sacker, later spelled Starter Bobby Doerr at second. The Sox boss said Pesky will be at third on the road, however.

Dropo, returning to action after being sidelined with a pulled side muscle, walloped a terrific homer. Billy Goodman in right field awatted three safeties in four trips and Doerr had a perfect three for three day at bat.

Starter Bill Hoeft, Tigers' rookie lefthander who had impressed in two prior starts, gave up eight hits and six runs in his three innings. Boston's Ray Scarborough blanked the Detroiters for six innings but lost his shutout in the seventh when Vic Wertz tripled and later scored. Score:

REDS BLANK PHILS, 2-0

TAMPA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Big Ted Kluszewski boomed a 400-foot home run over the right field fence in the last of the ninth today to break up a brilliant pitching duel and give the Cincinnati Reds a 2 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Phils.

Joe Adcock, who had singled, was on base when Kluszewski unloaded his game-winning blow.

Until that blast, it had been a pitcher's game all the way. Ewell Blackwell, who went seven innings, and Ken Raffensberger allowed the Phils only four hits, one a double by Granny Hamner.

Rookie John Thompson and Russ Meyer allowed only five hits, Kluszewski's wallop came off Meyer and it was one of three safe blows the big first sacker got. The game today was the last of spring training here. Score:

DODGERS WIN IN 11TH

MIAMI, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Hank Edwards' pinch single scoring Peewee Reese from second gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-3 victory over the Boston Braves in the 11th inning before 3,500 fans here today.

It was the fourth extra-inning game played by the Brooks in their last five games.

Edwards, operating under a Montreal contract but assured of a new major league chance with the Dodgers, smacked George Estock's first pitch into right field for a clean hit after Bruce Edwards had sacrificed Reese to second. Score:

Mangrum Wins Azalea Open By Single Stroke

Lloyd Earns $2,000, Three Tied For 2nd

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 1 (AP) — Lloyd Mangrum, veteran Chicago professional, won the $10,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament by one stroke today, shooting a closing 72 for 281.

He had to sweat out a 45-minute rules committee meeting over a possible rules infraction before he pocketed the $2,000 winner's check that shot him back into the top as the No. 1 money winner of the year.

A question arose shortly after Mangrum completed his round whether he had played with 15 clubs. One over the limit allowed by golfing rules.

As he said while the committee was deliberating, "I was putting so badly on the front nine, (he took a 33), that I planned to change putters, but somebody called my attention to the fact that I couldn't do that so I kept the old one."

Had Mangrum been found guilty of rules violation he could have been disqualified, but by unanimous decision the committee decided there was no infraction.

Three Tied For 2nd

Tied for second, a stroke back of Mangrum with 282, were professionals Jimmy Turnesa, Briarcliff, N. Y.; Jimmy Ferrier, San Francisco, and Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich.

Earl Stewart, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, the leader by a stroke at the start of the final round, shot a 75 today and finished with a 283 total landing in a three-way tie for fifth.

Turnesa, Ferrier and Furgol each received $1,066.66. Furgol clinched a berth in the Augusta Masters opening Thursday with his performance. They were only one stroke ahead of three other pros who had 283. Otto Greiner, Baltimore; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., winner here two years ago, and Stewart each took $606.66 for tying for fifth place.

The tournament's finish was one of the tightest in recent PGA history, with 10 players blanketed by three strokes going into the last nine holes.

Lloyd 7-Under Par

Mangrum, who scored rounds of 69-72-68-72, was seven under par for the 6,652-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. He began the day in second place, a stroke back of Stewart, the red-headed young Texas pro. Playing in different threesomes, each was out in two-over 38, but Mangrum steadied on the way in to clinch his third big one of the year.

Low amateur was Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, B. C., with 71 today for 293. He was two strokes ahead of Harvie Ward, Southern Pines, N. C. and Bill Stalls, Greenville, N. C.

We like the crack credited to the old Chippewa—67-year-old Charles Albert (Chief) Bender, now coach of the Philadelphia A's.

"I read in the papers that the army is getting its infantryman out of jeeps and making them walk," Bender said.

"Well, we ought to get these pitchers out of roadsters, too. That's what I'm doing."

Bender, who managed Johnstown in the Middle Atlantic League in 1927 when Cumberland won its first championship, declares present day pitchers are babied too much.

"We used to pitch a game and work out in batting practice the next day," the Chief asserted. "But here lately, a pitcher thinks he needs to sit down for two days after he's been in a game."

Of course, Bender was not referring to Jim Konstanty. The Phillies didn't let him sit down last season.

Douglas Connolly Of LaSalle Wins Sportsmanship Award

Explorer Ace 12th To Earn K. Of C. Prize

Coach Rupp Presents Gold Wrist Watch, 200 Attend Dinner

Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior forward, won the twelfth Cumberland Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award at the dinner marking the annual event of Cumberland Council No. 586 last night at the K. of C. Home.

Connolly, who is employed as a mailer by the Times and Alleganian Company and works after school hours, was a nominee for the second straight year and was adjudged the winner over seven other candidates from four Greater Cumberland schools.

Announcement that Connolly was the 1951 winner was made in the presence of 200 persons by John A. Jones, chairman of the selection committee. The blond Connolly is the fourth LaSalle player to earn the award. He was preceded by Bobby Stakem in 1941, Francis Shaffer in 1943 and Ed Gunning in 1945.

Rupp Presents Watch

The engraved gold wrist watch which goes to the winner each year was presented to Connolly by Adolph F. Rupp, coach of the University of Kentucky's national basketball champions of the 1950-51 season, who was the principal speaker.

Other nominees for the award were presented miniature gold basketballs by "Scotty" Hamilton, head basketball coach at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. The recipients were: Schley Lyons and Ronnie Cage, of Fort Hill High's W.M.I. League champions; Frank Phares and Ronald Sisk, Allegany High; Carl Hartman and Bill Phillips, Ridgeley High, and James Moran, LaSalle.

Carpenti Welcomes Guests

Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council, delivered the address of welcome and stated that the K. of C. Sportsmanship Award is dedicated to the late Francis J. "Frank" McMullen and John "Jack" Stakem, former Casey players, and was originated by the Casey Club and later taken over by the K. of C.

Past Winners Send Congrats

Four other past winners, namely, John Vernall, Ed Gunning, James H. Radcliffe, Donald F. Whiteman and Paul Lindsay were unable to be present but sent congratulatory letters and telegrams to the athlete chosen for the award.

Carpenti also introduced members of the committee on arrangements—John J. Creegan, chairman; Dr. John K. Rozum, Joseph Love, Floyd Jenkins, Alexander Schute, Victor Pascoe and Warren F. Chapman.

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, who acted as toastmaster, was introduced by Carpenti, and welcomed the main speaker, Coach Adolph Rupp.

Coaches Make Remarks

Preceding Mr. Rupp on the speaking program were Ralph Poling, Ridgeley High mentor; Art Slocum, of LaSalle High School; Walter L. Bowers, of Allegany and John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh, Fort Hill, and Rev. Regis Larkin, coach of St. Michael's championship teams, all of whom spoke briefly. It was pointed out that St. Michael's Frostburg Church League and K. of C. Youth League champions had won 50 of 52 contests during the 1950-51 season.

The concluding talks were given by "Scotty" Hamilton, Generals' mentor, and John Thomas, coach of Barton High School's Class "C" Maryland champions of 1951.

The invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. Father Larkin in the absence of the Very Rev. J. Lawrence Kilkenny, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, who was called out of town.

COACH RUPP CONGRATULATES WINNER — Coach Adolph F. Rupp, right, of the University of Kentucky's national collegiate basketball champions, is shown congratulating Douglas Connolly, LaSalle High School senior, after the latter had been presented a gold engraved wrist watch — the K. of C.'s 12th annual Sportsmanship Award — last night. Peter J. Carpenti, grand knight of Cumberland Council 586, donor of the award is shown looking on.

THEY WERE NOMINEES FOR AWARD — Here are the eight nominees for the 12th annual Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award shown seated about the table at the dinner held last night at the K. of C. Home. The basketball players of the four Greater Cumberland Schools shown clockwise are: Ronnie Sisk, Allegany; Ronnie Cage, Fort Hill; Frank Phares, Allegany; Schley Lyons, Fort Hill; Carl Hartman, Ridgeley; Bill Phillips, Ridgeley; Douglas Connolly, LaSalle, the winner, and James Moran, LaSalle. Miniature gold basketballs went to all but the winner.

Rupp Prescribes Olympics Yearly As World Tonic

Gunter Makes Hit As Toastmaster

Olympic Games held annually would tear down international barriers and would do more good than all the ministers and ambassadors to Europe in the next 1,000 years.

Such was the opinion expressed by Adolph F. Rupp, noted coach of the University of Kentucky's championship basketball teams, who occupied the role of principal speaker at the Knights of Columbus Sportsmanship Award Dinner last night at the K. of C. Home.

Mr. Rupp, who was introduced by Toastmaster William A. Gunter as —The Man In The Brown Suit—Mr. Basketball—The Baron of Basketball and Old Rupp and Ready, reviewed the progress of many of his great quints at the Lexington school, and dwelt at length on the Olympic Games of 1928 when his "kids" won international fame.

The native Kansan, whose Kentucky teams won 410 games and lost 77 in 20 seasons and copped three national titles, told of the trials and tribulations of a college cage coach in his lengthy an inspiring talk.

Basketball Takes Beating

"Basketball this year has taken a beating due to the scandal that has reared its ugly head," Rupp declared, "yet there are millions who have been born in poverty, spent lives in poverty, died in poverty—still they were honest."

In his talk in regard to the Olmpics of 1948, Rupp told of the Czechoslovakian coach and athletes who refused to return to their homeland and live behind the "Iron Curtain." They are now in the United States seeking citizenship papers, he added.

"There's something wrong back there," the speaker declared. "There is plenty of talk about universal brotherhood but we're not doing anything about it."

Gunter Scores Hit

William A. Gunter, Cumberland attorney, played the role of toastmaster in his inimitable way and had 'em rolling in the aisles with his funny stories and witty remarks. Gunter was introduced as the originator of the "Bigga Da Lou Stories" by Grand Knight Peter J. Carpenti.

The toastmaster caused quite a chuckle when he addressed the gathering of 200 with "Mr. chairman and fellow Republicans," and then told his audience that in the recent election he didn't "run for attorney general of Maryland, I just walked." He guaranteed those present the proceedings would be over on the same day they started.

The affair lasted about three hours.

Righthander Ernie Groth allowed the American Leaguers their two runs in the first six innings. One was a home run clout by Elmer Valo in the sixth. Joe Payne shut out the Mackmen in the last three innings without a safety.

RED SOX SWAMP TIGERS

SARASOTA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill unfurled his newly planned "Fenway Park lineup" today and the Sockers promptly swamped Detroit, 8-1, with a 14-hit attack including homers by Walt Dropo and Rookie Fred Hatfield.

O'Neill started Junior Stephens—last year's regular shortstop — at third base and put Veteran Lou Boudreau at short. Johnny Pesky, regular third sacker, later spelled Starter Bobby Doerr at second. The Sox boss said Pesky will be at third on the road, however.

Dropo, returning to action after being sidelined with a pulled side muscle, walloped a terrific homer. Billy Goodman in right field awatted three safeties in four trips and Doerr had a perfect three for three day at bat.

Starter Bill Hoeft, Tigers' rookie lefthander who had impressed in two prior starts, gave up eight hits and six runs in his three innings. Boston's Ray Scarborough blanked the Detroiters for six innings but lost his shutout in the seventh when Vic Wertz tripled and later scored. Score:

REDS BLANK PHILS, 2-0

TAMPA, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Big Ted Kluszewski boomed a 400-foot home run over the right field fence in the last of the ninth today to break up a brilliant pitching duel and give the Cincinnati Reds a 2 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Phils.

Joe Adcock, who had singled, was on base when Kluszewski unloaded his game-winning blow.

Until that blast, it had been a pitcher's game all the way. Ewell Blackwell, who went seven innings, and Ken Raffensberger allowed the Phils only four hits, one a double by Granny Hamner.

Rookie John Thompson and Russ Meyer allowed only five hits, Kluszewski's wallop came off Meyer and it was one of three safe blows the big first sacker got. The game today was the last of spring training here. Score:

DODGERS WIN IN 11TH

MIAMI, Fla., April 1 (AP) — Hank Edwards' pinch single scoring Peewee Reese from second gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-3 victory over the Boston Braves in the 11th inning before 3,500 fans here today.

Edwards, operating under a Montreal contract but assured of a new major league chance with the Dodgers, smacked George Estock's first pitch into right field for a clean hit after Bruce Edwards had sacrificed Reese to second. Score:

Mangrum Wins Azalea Open By Single Stroke

Lloyd Earns $2,000, Three Tied For 2nd

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 1 (AP) — Lloyd Mangrum, veteran Chicago professional, won the $10,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament by one stroke today, shooting a closing 72 for 281.

He had to sweat out a 45-minute rules committee meeting over a possible rules infraction before he pocketed the $2,000 winner's check that shot him back into the top as the No. 1 money winner of the year.

A question arose shortly after Mangrum completed his round whether he had played with 15 clubs. One over the limit allowed by golfing rules.

As he said while the committee was deliberating, "I was putting so badly on the front nine, (he took a 38), that I planned to change putters, but somebody called my attention to the fact that I couldn't do that so I kept the old one."

Had Mangrum been found guilty of rules violation he could have been disqualified, but by unanimous decision the committee decided there was no infraction.

Three Tied For 2nd

Tied for second, a stroke back of Mangrum with 282, were professionals Jimmy Turnesa, Briarcliff, N. Y.; Jimmy Ferrier, San Francisco, and Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich.

Earl Stewart, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, the leader by a stroke at the start of the final round, shot a 75 today and finished with a 283 total landing in a three-way tie for fifth.

Turnesa, Ferrier and Furgol each received $1,066.66. Furgol clinched a berth in the Augusta Masters opening Thursday with his performance. They were only one stroke ahead of three other pros who had 283. Otto Greiner, Baltimore; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., winner here two years ago, and Stewart each took $606.66 for tying for fifth place.

The tournament's finish was one of the tightest in recent PGA history, with 10 players blanketed by three strokes going into the last nine holes.

Lloyd 7-Under Par

Mangrum, who scored rounds of 69-72-68-72, was seven under par for the 6,652-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. He began the day in second place, a stroke back of Stewart, the red-headed young Texas pro. Playing in different threesomes, each was out in two-over 38, but Mangrum steadied on the way in to clinch his third big one of the year.

Low amateur was Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, B. C., with 71 today for 293. He was two strokes ahead of Harvie Ward, Southern Pines, N. C. and Bill Stalls, Greenville, N. C.

Cleveland Obtains George Stirnweiss

TUCSON, Ariz., April 1 (AP) — Infielder Freddy Marsh was today traded by the Cleveland Indians of the American League to the St. Louis Browns for George (Snuffy) Stirnweiss and Merrill Combs.

Combs played part of last season with Washington before going to San Diego in the Pacific Coast League where he hit .283 and fielded .932.

We like the crack credited to the old Chippewa—67-year-old Charles Albert (Chief) Bender, now coach of the Philadelphia A's.

"I read in the papers that the army is getting its infantryman out of jeeps and making them walk," Bender said.

"Well, we ought to get these pitchers out of roadsters, too. That's what I'm doing."

Bender, who managed Johnstown in the Middle Atlantic League in 1927 when Cumberland won its first championship, declares present day pitchers are babied too much.

"We used to pitch a game and work out in batting practice the next day," the Chief asserted. "But here lately, a pitcher thinks he needs to sit down for two days after he's been in a game."

Of course, Bender was not referring to Jim Konstanty. The Phillies didn't let him sit down last season.

Wilson, Hitting Star Of Coast Loop, Gets Buildup In N. Y. Giants' Camp

By WALTER L. JOHNS

Central Press Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The guy the Indians grabbed, the Yanks took and then let go may become a star with the New York Giants.

At 29, Artie Wilson is a little old to be starting out on a major league career, but the left-handed hitting Negro shortstop is the most-talked-about recruit in the Giants' camp here.

He's what you might call the "apple" of Leo Durocher's eye, to resurrect an old phrase, for the Lip spends considerable time in pepper games with Artie and kids with him as much, if not more, than he does with other players on his squad.

Artie's record is absolutely amazing. In 1949, in his first year in organized ball, he was with Oakland and played in 165 games, smashed out 211 hits, stole 47 bases and finished the season with a .348 average, tops in the league.

Last year, also with Oakland, he played in 196 games, scored 168 runs and recorded 264 hits. He was the second best fielder and his 31 base thefts also put him second in that department. His batting average was .312.

Although he can play any position in the infield, and has, his best spot is shortstop. He will have a tough time taking Al Dark's job away from him but Artie will give Leo a fine reserve infielder and a pinch-hitter.

WILSON is the player that figured in quite a story a couple of years ago. Bill Veeck, then owner of the Indians, heard about him and flew to Puerto Rico to sign him.

Wilson says the Yanks also were interested in him and one of their scouts told him to wait a couple of days and he would be back to see him.

The slick shortstop, however, was nabbed by Veeck and the Yanks screamed to high heaven. The result was that a ruling was made and Wilson awarded to the Yankees.

Wilson said in camp here that the Yankees offered to send him to their farm club, at half the pay he was getting from the Birmingham, Ala., Black Barons where he starred before going to Puerto to play ball.

Artie Wilson

And, although he wasn't interested in their offer, Wilson's rights were awarded to the Yanks.

The Yanks finally sold his contract to Oakland where Wilson became a star.

BORN at Springville, Ala., he started on his baseball career at Hooper City High. He also played quarterback on the football team.

He quit in the 11th grade to go to work. He had been playing semi-pro ball while still going to school, and when he went to work for the American Cast Iron Pipe company he found it had a baseball team. He soon became the star of that team.

W. S. Welch and Abe Saperstein signed him to a pro contract in 1944. He became a member of the Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro American league and it wasn't long before he was one of the league's stars.

HE CREDITS Charley Dressen, former Oakland manager, with helping him most.

Wilson is married and has two daughters, Jean, 11, and Zoe Ann, 9.

In the winter time he likes to hunt and fish and play table tennis. And "fix up" around his home.

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April — (INS) — What happened to Denise Darcel is what every young actress dreams might happen to her. Denise came from New York to play the second role in "Westward, The Women." Director William Wellman tested her with Robert Taylor and she was so good that he asked Dore Schary to take a look at the test.

Result—Denise now gets the lead—the role that Ava Gardner was originally supposed to play. This is a break for the French girl whose acting heretofore was a part in "Battleground" when she played the only woman in the picture.

Now about Denise's much publicized trouble with her bridegroom, Peter Crosby. He has agreed to leave her alone in Hollywood for six weeks while she makes her picture. Then, after she finishes, they will discuss their future together. That sounds like good sense.

Soon to be a bridegroom, King Farouk of Egypt is supposedly the hidden angel behind a new motion picture. I wasn't able to learn the title, but I do know it will star Danielle Darrieux and will be directed by Carlo Rim.

The Egyptians are eager to control the whole market by investing in suitable pictures which will be screened in France and made in several versions.

Well, Farouk has plenty of money to invest in movies. Seems he's a business man as well as an admirer of beautiful women.

Young John Barrymore who begins to look more and more like his famous father, the one and only John Barrymore, is moving in with his Aunt Ethel Barrymore.

I suppose he'll go back home when his mother, Dolores Costello Vruwink, is out of the hospital. She has really been sick and will require nurses until she is better.

Ethel has always been interested in young John and their appearance together on my program was one of the highlights. Johnny, only 18, wants an apartment of his own, and I'll bet Ethel will talk him out of that in a hurry.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Dan Dailey was at the Encore with Patricia Hardy, of the Los Angeles social set. I had hoped Dan and Virginia Grey had settled down to steady dating because I think they'd be good for each other.

Even though he goes night clubbing almost every night, Dan doesn't touch a drop to drink although he smokes a lot and is restless to get back to work.

He starts work on "Dizzy Dean" in six weeks. He is popular and his pictures with Betty Grable made "plenty" for 20th Century-Fox.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

From New York comes word that Winthrop Rockefeller and Ginny Simms are being seen all about town. What happened to Gretchen North?

Yvonne De Carlo, billed in France as "the most beautiful girl in the world," was dined and wined on the Riviera by Prince Pierre of Monaco, father of the Monte Carlo monarch —Prince Renier III.

A new woosome and young love is Roddy McDowell and Betty Lynn, 20th's pretty red head.

Pev Marley glimpsed having a dinner with a girl who looked more like Linda Darnell than Linda herself. Everyone thought it was his ex-wife, but it wasn't.

Ginger Rogers is seeing Robert Taylor more and more. They were playing tennis together at Jack Warner's and were there for dinner Saturday night.

Nicky Hilton and his mother, Mrs. Mary Saxon, are motoring from El Paso through the south. One of their stops will be at Miami Beach where they'll visit Elizabeth Taylor's parents.

Speaking of Elizabeth—she and Stanley Donen were all over the place at the M.G.M. party at the Rodeo Room after the academy.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Wilson, Hitting Star Of Coast Loop, Gets Buildup In N. Y. Giants' Camp

By WALTER L. JOHNS

Central Press Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The guy the Indians grabbed, the Yanks took and then let go may become a star with the New York Giants.

At 29, Artie Wilson is a little old to be starting out on a major league career, but the left-handed hitting Negro shortstop is the most-talked-about recruit in the Giants' camp here.

He's what you might call the "apple" of Leo Durocher's eye, to resurrect an old phrase, for the Lip spends considerable time in pepper games with Artie and kids with him as much, if not more, than he does with other players on his squad.

Artie's record is absolutely amazing. In 1949, in his first year in organized ball, he was with Oakland and played in 165 games, smashed out 211 hits, stole 47 bases and finished the season with a .348 average, tops in the league.

Last year, also with Oakland, he played in 196 games, scored 168 runs and recorded 264 hits. He was the second best fielder and his 31 base thefts also put him second in that department. His batting average was .312.

Although he can play any position in the infield, and has, his best spot is shortstop. He will have a tough time taking Al Dark's job away from him but Artie will give Leo a fine reserve infielder and a pinch-hitter.

WILSON is the player that figured in quite a story a couple of years ago. Bill Veeck, then owner of the Indians, heard about him and flew to Puerto Rico to sign him.

Wilson says the Yanks also were interested in him and one of their scouts told him to wait a couple of days and he would be back to see him.

The slick shortstop, however, was nabbed by Veeck and the Yanks screamed to high heaven. The result was that a ruling was made and Wilson awarded to the Yankees.

Wilson said in camp here that the Yankees offered to send him to their farm club, at half the pay he was getting from the Birmingham, Ala., Black Barons where he starred before going to Puerto to play ball.

Artie Wilson

And, although he wasn't interested in their offer, Wilson's rights were awarded to the Yanks.

The Yanks finally sold his contract to Oakland where Wilson became a star.

BORN at Springville, Ala., he started on his baseball career at Hooper City High. He also played quarterback on the football team.

He quit in the 11th grade to go to work. He had been playing semi-pro ball while still going to school, and when he went to work for the American Cast Iron Pipe company he found it had a baseball team. He soon became the star of that team.

W. S. Welch and Abe Saperstein signed him to a pro contract in 1944. He became a member of the Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro American league and it wasn't long before he was one of the league's stars.

HE CREDITS Charley Dressen, former Oakland manager, with helping him most.

Wilson is married and has two daughters, Jean, 11, and Zoe Ann, 9.

KEEPING UP WITH

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April — (INS) — What happened to Denise Darcel is what every young actress dreams might happen to her. Denise came from New York to play the second role in "Westward, The Women." Director William Wellman tested her with Robert Taylor and she was so good that he asked Dore Schary to take a look at the test.

Result—Denise now gets the lead—the role that Ava Gardner was originally supposed to play. This is a break for the French girl whose acting heretofore was a part in "Battleground" when she played the only woman in the picture.

Now about Denise's much publicized trouble with her bridegroom, Peter Crosby. He has agreed to leave her alone in Hollywood for six weeks while she makes her picture. Then, after she finishes, they will discuss their future together. That sounds like good sense.

Soon to be a bridegroom, King Farouk of Egypt is supposedly the hidden angel behind a new motion picture. I wasn't able to learn the title, but I do know it will star Danielle Darrieux and will be directed by Carlo Rim.

The Egyptians are eager to control the whole market by investing in suitable pictures which will be screened in France and made in several versions.

Well, Farouk has plenty of money to invest in movies. Seems he's a business man as well as an admirer of beautiful women.

Young John Barrymore who begins to look more and more like his famous father, the one and only John Barrymore, is moving in with his Aunt Ethel Barrymore.

I suppose he'll go back home when his mother, Dolores Costello Vruwink, is out of the hospital. She has really been sick and will require nurses until she is better.

Ethel has always been interested in young John and their appearance together on my program was one of the highlights. Johnny, only 18, wants an apartment of his own, and I'll bet Ethel will talk him out of that in a hurry.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Dan Dailey was at the Encore with Patricia Hardy, of the Los Angeles social set. I had hoped Dan and Virginia Grey had settled down to steady dating because I think they'd be good for each other.

Even though he goes night clubbing almost every night, Dan doesn't touch a drop to drink although he smokes a lot and is restless to get back to work.

He starts work on "Dizzy Dean" in six weeks. He is popular and his pictures with Betty Grable made "plenty" for 20th Century-Fox.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

From New York comes word that Winthrop Rockefeller and Ginny Simms are being seen all about town. What happened to Gretchen North?

Yvonne De Carlo, billed in France as "the most beautiful girl in the world," was dined and wined on the Riviera by Prince Pierre of Monaco, father of the Monte Carlo monarch—Prince Renier III.

A new woosome and young love is Roddy McDowell and Betty Lynn, 20th's pretty red head.

Pev Marley glimpsed having a dinner with a girl who looked more like Linda Darnell than Linda herself. Everyone thought it was his ex-wife, but it wasn't.

Ginger Rogers is seeing Robert Taylor more and more. They were playing tennis together at Jack Warner's and were there for dinner Saturday night.

Nicky Hilton and his mother, Mrs. Mary Saxon, are motoring from El Paso through the south. One of their stops will be at Miami Beach where they'll visit Elizabeth Taylor's parents.

Speaking of Elizabeth—she and Stanley Donen were all over the place at the M.G.M. party at the Rodeo Room after the academy.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Wilson, Hitting Star Of Coast Loop, Gets Buildup In N. Y. Giants' Camp

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The guy the Indians grabbed, the Yanks took and then let go may become a star with the New York Giants.

At 29, Artie Wilson is a little old to be starting out on a major league career, but the left-handed hitting Negro shortstop is the most-talked-about recruit in the Giants' camp here.

He's what you might call the "apple" of Leo Durocher's eye, to resurrect an old phrase, for the Lip spends considerable time in pepper games with Artie and kids with him as much, if not more, than he does with other players on his squad.

Artie's record is absolutely amazing. In 1949, in his first year in organized ball, he was with Oakland and played in 165 games, smashed out 211 hits, stole 47 bases and finished the season with a .348 average, tops in the league.

Last year, also with Oakland, he played in 196 games, scored 168 runs and recorded 264 hits. He was the second best fielder and his 31 base thefts also put him second in that department. His batting average was .312.

Although he can play any position in the infield, and has, his best spot is shortstop. He will have a tough time taking Al Dark's job away from him but Artie will give Leo a fine reserve infielder and a pinch-hitter.

WILSON is the player that figured in quite a story a couple of years ago. Bill Veeck, then owner of the Indians, heard about him and flew to Puerto Rico to sign him.

Wilson says the Yanks also were interested in him and one of their scouts told him to wait a couple of days and he would be back to see him.

The slick shortstop, however, was nabbed by Veeck and the Yanks screamed to high heaven. The result was that a ruling was made and Wilson awarded to the Yankees.

Wilson said in camp here that the Yankees offered to send him to their farm club, at half the pay he was getting from the Birmingham, Ala., Black Barons where he starred before going to Puerto to play ball.

Artie Wilson

And, although he wasn't interested in their offer, Wilson's rights were awarded to the Yanks.

The Yanks finally sold his contract to Oakland where Wilson became a star.

BORN at Springville, Ala., he started on his baseball career at Hooper City High. He also played quarterback on the football team.

He quit in the 11th grade to go to work. He had been playing semi-pro ball while still going to school, and when he went to work for the American Cast Iron Pipe company he found it had a baseball team. He soon became the star of that team.

W. S. Welch and Abe Saperstein signed him to a pro contract in 1944. He became a member of the Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro American league and it wasn't long before he was one of the league's stars.

HE CREDITS Charley Dressen, former Oakland manager, with helping him most.

Wilson is married and has two daughters, Jean, 11, and Zoe Ann, 9.

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April — (INS) — What happened to Denise Darcel is what every young actress dreams might happen to her. Denise came from New York to play the second role in "Westward, The Women." Director William Wellman tested her with Robert Taylor and she was so good that he asked Dore Schary to take a look at the test.

Result—Denise now gets the lead—the role that Ava Gardner was originally supposed to play. This is a break for the French girl whose acting heretofore was a part in "Battleground" when she played the only woman in the picture.

Now about Denise's much publicized trouble with her bridegroom, Peter Crosby. He has agreed to leave her alone in Hollywood for six weeks while she makes her picture. Then, after she finishes, they will discuss their future together. That sounds like good sense.

• — • — •

Soon to be a bridegroom, King Farouk of Egypt is supposedly the hidden angel behind a new motion picture. I wasn't able to learn the title, but I do know it will star Danielle Darrieux and will be directed by Carlo Rim.

The Egyptians are eager to control the whole market by investing in suitable pictures which will be screened in France and made in several versions.

Well, Farouk has plenty of money to invest in movies. Seems he's a business man as well as an admirer of beautiful women.

• — • — •

Young John Barrymore who begins to look more and more like his famous father, the one and only John Barrymore, is moving in with his Aunt Ethel Barrymore.

I suppose he'll go back home when his mother, Dolores Costello Vruwink, is out of the hospital. She has really been sick and will require nurses until she is better.

Ethel has always been interested in young John and their appearance together on my program was one of the highlights. Johnny, only 18, wants an apartment of his own, and I'll bet Ethel will talk him out of that in a hurry.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Dan Dailey was at the Encore with Patricia Hardy, of the Los Angeles social set. I had hoped Dan and Virginia Grey had settled down to steady dating because I think they'd be good for each other.

Even though he goes night clubbing almost every night, Dan doesn't touch a drop to drink although he smokes a lot and is restless to get back to work.

He starts work on "Dizzy Dean" in six weeks. He is popular and his pictures with Betty Grable made "plenty" for 20th Century-Fox.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

From New York comes word that Winthrop Rockefeller and Ginny Simms are being seen all about town. What happened to Gretchen North?

Yvonne De Carlo, billed in France as "the most beautiful girl in the world," was dined and wined on the Riviera by Prince Pierre of Monaco, father of the Monte Carlo monarch —Prince Renier III.

A new woosome and young love is Roddy McDowell and Betty Lynn, 20th's pretty red head.

Pev Marley glimpsed having a dinner with a girl who looked more like Linda Darnell than Linda herself. Everyone thought it was his ex-wife, but it wasn't.

Ginger Rogers is seeing Robert Taylor more and more. They were playing tennis together at Jack Warner's and were there for dinner Saturday night.

Nicky Hilton and his mother, Mrs. Mary Saxon, are motoring from El Paso through the south. One of their stops will be at Miami Beach where they'll visit Elizabeth Taylor's parents.

Speaking of Elizabeth—she and Stanley Donen were all over the place at the M.G.M. party at the Rodeo Room after the academy.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

"It's Howdy Doody Time"

HOWDY DOODY occupies a very distinctive and not entirely enviable niche in the annals of the television industry. This children's program, its producers claim, has been seen by more people than have witnessed either Milton Berle or Sen. Kefauver, simply because it's been on oftener (five times a week, half an hour, for more than three years) and in so many more cities (49).

John Crosby

The fact that Howdy—you don't use his last name any more than you use Tallulah's—has been observed by so many people so often should not be confused with popularity. Much of Howdy's audience is composed of reluctant adults who would like to wring Bob Smith's neck. To an adult, Howdy Doody is both irritating and baffling. It contains nothing that adults normally consider entertainment; the plots through which its mixture of puppet and live characters wander are so child-like and at the same time so devious as to be totally incomprehensible to adults. (To the kids, the story line is a cinch.)

After witnessing it once, the exasperated parent is likely to head for the cellar or the roof to escape the darned thing. Howdy Doody, however, is pretty hard to get away from unless you live in an awfully large house. From the moment it opens with a chorus of 40 children piping "It's Howdy Doody time" at the top of their lungs to the closing, the program is conducted at a noise level roughly five times that of Berle, or about 20 times that of Frank Costello.

Bob Smith, the inventor of Howdy, is dressed in a costume which is a mixture of an African explorer and Hopalong Cassidy. Howdy is a freckle-faced Huckleberry Finn of a puppet. Clarabell is a male clown who can't talk and issues her—pardon me,—his signals by means of an auto horn. Are you getting confused? You must be over nine years old, then. For the benefit of parents who wonder when they can get rid of Howdy, the age group is from two to nine. After that they graduate—or should graduate—to Hopalong. If he's still mad about Howdy after age nine, send him to a psychiatrist.

Despite the complete lack of sense to you and me, Smith, a former piano player on an early morning radio program, seems to have figured the emotional level of the age two to nine group brilliantly. This puppet now grosses $300,000 a year for Mr. Smith, which is about $100,000 more than Faye Emerson, a non-puppet, earns. It's also more than Uncle Miltie earns. (Uncle Miltie is a horse who may or may not win the Kentucky Derby, in which case I may or may not revise my figures.)

Besides his television appearances, Howdy Doody can be found in department and other stores in a variety of manifestations. Howdy Doody merchandise—including cowboy shirts, albums, school bags, balloons, balls, bedspreads, belts, buttons, chairs, puppets, crayon sets, dolls, draperies, ear muffs, piggy banks, umbrellas, pinwheels, lamps, greeting cards, jams, ice creams and—oh, brother, this is the end—eggs—is sold to the tune of $15,000,000 every year. So far as I know, the Howdy Doody egg, just a plain hen's egg, is the first endorsed egg.

In 1948, this woodenhead — not Smith, Howdy—ran for President. He polled more votes than Henry Wallace, though not quite so many as Harry Truman. His platform: two Christmases and one school day a year, more pictures in history books, double sodas for a dime, and more movies.

Some 10,000,000 children watch the show, depending on when their bath hour is, and almost anything Howdy says receives grave and rather alarming attention. One premium offer on the show drew 785,000 letters, or roughly ten times the mail Truman gets on a major speech. Howdy has enormous influence, mostly for the good. He has persuaded millions of moppets to brush their teeth and is credited with driving thousands of them to the dentist.

In 1952, he may run again on a Mars candy bar platform. Don't be at all surprised if he wins.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

"It's Howdy Doody Time"

HOWDY DOODY occupies a very distinctive and not entirely enviable niche in the annals of the television industry. This children's program, its producers claim, has been seen by more people than have witnessed either Milton Berle or Sen. Kefauver, simply because it's been on oftener (five times a week, half an hour, for more than three years) and in so many more cities (49).

John Crosby

The fact that Howdy—you don't use his last name any more than you use Tallulah's—has been observed by so many people so often should not be confused with popularity. Much of Howdy's audience is composed of reluctant adults who would like to wring Bob Smith's neck. To an adult, Howdy Doody is both irritating and baffling. It contains nothing that adults normally consider entertainment; the plots through which its mixture of puppet and live characters wander are so child-like and at the same time so devious as to be totally incomprehensible to adults. (To the kids, the story line is a cinch.)

After witnessing it once, the exasperated parent is likely to head for the cellar or the roof to escape the darned thing. Howdy Doody, however, is pretty hard to get away from unless you live in an awfully large house. From the moment it opens with a chorus of 40 children piping "It's Howdy Doody time" at the top of their lungs to the closing, the program is conducted at a noise level roughly five times that of Berle, or about 20 times that of Frank Costello.

Bob Smith, the inventor of Howdy, is dressed in a costume which is a mixture of an African explorer and Hopalong Cassidy. Howdy is a freckle-faced Huckleberry Finn of a puppet. Clarabell is a male clown who can't talk and issues her—pardon me,—his signals by means of an auto horn. Are you getting confused? You must be over nine years old, then. For the benefit of parents who wonder when they can get rid of Howdy, the age group is from two to nine. After that they graduate—or should graduate—to Hopalong. If he's still mad about Howdy after age nine, send him to a psychiatrist.

Despite the complete lack of sense to you and me, Smith, a former piano player on an early morning radio program, seems to have figured the emotional level of the age two to nine group brilliantly. This puppet now grosses $300,000 a year for Mr. Smith, which is about $100,000 more than Faye Emerson, a non-puppet, earns. It's also more than Uncle Miltie earns. (Uncle Miltie is a horse who may or may not win the Kentucky Derby, in which case I may or may not revise my figures.)

Besides his television appearances, Howdy Doody can be found in department and other stores in a variety of manifestations. Howdy Doody merchandise—including cowboy shirts, albums, school bags, balloons, balls, bedspreads, belts, buttons, chairs, puppets, crayon sets, dolls, draperies, ear muffs, piggy banks, umbrellas, pinwheels, lamps, greeting cards, jams, ice creams and—oh, brother, this is the end—eggs—is sold to the tune of $15,000,000 every year. So far as I know, the Howdy Doody egg, just a plain hen's egg, is the first endorsed egg.

In 1948, this woodenhead — not Smith, Howdy—ran for President. He polled more votes than Henry Wallace, though not quite so many as Harry Truman. His platform: two Christmases and one school day a year, more pictures in history books, double sodas for a dime, and more movies.

Some 10,000,000 children watch the show, depending on when their bath hour is, and almost anything Howdy says receives grave and rather alarming attention. One premium offer on the show drew 785,000 letters, or roughly ten times the mail Truman gets on a major speech. Howdy has enormous influence, mostly for the good. He has persuaded millions of moppets to brush their teeth and is credited with driving thousands of them to the dentist.

In 1952, he may run again on a Mars candy bar platform. Don't be at all surprised if he wins.

Saturday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Cards of Thanks

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our many friends and neighbors who were so kind to us following the death of our beloved husband and father, Robert Beeman. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Amos Stone for his comforting words and all those who sent floral tributes and those who donated the use of their automobiles.

Mrs. Robert Beeman and Children

We take this means of thanking our many friends and neighbors for their outstanding kindness in our bereavement, the death of our beloved husband and father, William A. Ridler. We especially thank Rev. C. H. Goshorn for his comforting words and those who sent floral tributes and contributed cars. We also thank the American Legion, James P. Love Post, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars for their part in the final service to our beloved.

Cards of Thanks

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our many friends and neighbors who were so kind to us following the death of our beloved husband and father, Robert Beeman. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Amos Stone for his comforting words and all those who sent floral tributes and those who donated the use of their automobiles.

Mrs. Robert Beeman and Children

We take this means of thanking our many friends and neighbors for their outstanding kindness in our bereavement, the death of our beloved husband and father, William A. Ridler. We especially thank Rev. C. H. Goshorn for his comforting words and those who sent floral tributes and contributed cars. We also thank the American Legion, James P. Love Post, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars for their part in the final service to our beloved.

Mrs. Mary B. Ridler and Children

Negro Attends Church, Shoots Woman And Self

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP) — George Hollis, 40-year-old negro, listened attentively to the sermon at the Mount Calvary Freewill Baptist Church today, then shot a 40-year-old widow and himself with the pistol he had carried to church.

Hollis, an employe of Bethlehem Steel at its Sparrows Point plant, was dead on arrival at a hospital. He shot himself through the right ear.

Mrs. Clara Green was in serious condition with a bullet wound in the back of her neck.

William Corey, a deacon at the negro church, gave this account of the shooting:

Both Hollis and Mrs. Green had attended noon church services. Then Mrs. Green joined a group that was eating dinner at the church.

Hollis walked up to the widow at the dinner table and told her he wanted to speak to her when she was finished.

They both went to the community hall, which was empty, and a few seconds later the shots were heard.

Friends of the two said Hollis and Mrs. Green had known each other for about two years but "had a bust-up Friday night."

NLRB Orders Elections In Building Industry

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board, for the first time in its 16-year history, today ordered elections in the building industry. Eight AFL unions protested.

By its action the board assumed brand new responsibilities in the scattered construction business employing 2,000,000. The uneven nature of employment in those trades had prompted the board to keep hands off so far as employe elections are concerned, up to now.

Fire Levels Shopping Center At St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 1 (AP)—A spectacular fire, punctuated with showering bricks and explosions, destroyed most of the Highland Park shopping center in St. Paul early today.

Nine of the 17 businesses in the center, which covered an extra large city block, were destroyed. Three more were badly damaged.

City Architect Alfred H. Schroeder estimated the loss at about $1,250,000.

A fire chief and the wife of one of the store owners were injured, neither seriously. The woman's husband wasn't hurt, but an explosion shot him all the way across a wide street and under a car.

Carvel Hall Starts Fire Cleanup Job

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — Historic Carvel Hall, swept by flames Friday night, started trying hard today to clean up in time for the annual flood of midshipmen's families over June Week.

The job is repairing $200,000 damage.

The hotel, part of which was built back in 1763 by William Paca, signer of the Declaration of Independence, was seared by a burst of fire about 11 p. m. Friday night.

Many residents of the hotel rushed into the street in their night clothes. A crowd of merrymakers fled a dance in one of the ballrooms.

Four fire companies with about 200 men went to the scene. Twelve firemen were injured, three by falling through a caved-in floor. Firehoses poured streams of water into the flames until they were extinguished about 4 a. m. The last firehose was turned off at 10:30 a. m.

Baby Delivered After Mother's Death Dies

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP)—Doctors at South Baltimore General Hospital last night delivered a baby girl alive 10 minutes after her mother died of injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

But the infant died at 12:30 p. m. today.

An autopsy was being conducted to determine the exact cause of death, but a hospital spokesman said it appeared the baby's infant brain was damaged beyond recovery by lack of oxygen for 20 to 30 minutes. Its lungs also failed to expand normally, he said.

The mother 33-year-old Mrs. Alice Lepore, or near Ferndale, Md., died almost immediately after arrival at the hospital.

Martinsburg Bookies Raided; Seven Arrested

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., April 1. (AP)—Police arrested seven persons and confiscated $2,700 cash in raids at two bookmaking places here yesterday.

State Police Sergeant E. L. Roush said the biggest haul was made at a second-floor room on West Race Street. State and city police who teamed up in the raid found 61 patrons and confiscated $1,600 from a booth.

Roush identified those arrested as Mike Edison, 43, Charles Myers, 39, Giles Pifer, 50, Pat Masuto, 32, Richard F. Hook, 50, and John W. Wilt, 54. Hook is from Hagerstown, Md., the others from Martinsburg.

Danna Beeler, 45, Martinsburg, was arrested in a second raid on North Queen Street. Police found half a dozen patrons there, and confiscated $1,100 in cash.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT IS A PRE-EMPT?

IN PRACTICALLY all situations, a suit bid which is one level higher than just enough to be legal is a strength-shower to one extent or another with all good players. The degree of strength is dependent on circumstances, ranging from an opening two-bid to a single-jump overcall. Any higher suit bid — two or more above the legal minimum—is considered principally a pre-empt, an effort to shut out probably stronger opponents. Some players never make such a bid, feeling that it crowds their partners more harmfully than it bothers the other side. Some make such bids with great frequency. The middle ground is furnished by those who bid that way only when their hand is so weak in high cards that it probably can't take a solitary trick on the defense.

Notice the variation in the action of the West players at three tables of a duplicate game. Where the first bid only 1-Spade, he decided after the 4-Hearts that he ought to sacrifice, which he did. He was set only one trick because South's double caused him to finesse on the first round of trumps, so that he lost only two in each minor.

The West at Table 3 went the other extreme, bidding 4-Spades over the 1-Heart. He was set two tricks, losing one in trumps in addition to the minor losers, because he had no direct reason to finesse the trumps, expecting the doubler at his left to have them.

Where the middle ground was pursued, with West bidding 2-Spades to show he had either considerable two-suiter with high-card strength, or else a powerful long suit, he felt he had told his true story with a single call. So he let South's 4-Hearts pass to East and the latter cheerfully doubled. It was beaten a trick, with two in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs.

Additional Bills To Be Considered By Legislature

General Assembly Continues Session

The Maryland General Assembly, which had hoped to end the present session Saturday, made plans to continue today with several important measures due for consideration. Steps were also taken to iron out difficulties over the state's $163,000,000 budget.

The House and Senate named a special committee of six members to decide what to do about Governor McKeldin's proposal to transfer $1,768,600 in State Police expenses from general funds to motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin Promises Veto

The House passed the bill as written. Senate Democrats tacked on a rider which said the authority would be good only for one year. They also proposed that if the state gets any extra money after next July 1 it must be put back into the motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin said the Senate action made a "farce and a joke" of his bill and promised a veto.

The committee members are Senators Sybert (D-Howard), Preston (D-Balto 5th) and Monroe (R-Charles) and Delegates Dempsey (D-Balto 3rd), Boone (D-Balto county) and Lofstrand (R-Montgomery).

The budget itself has passed both Houses. But one part of it will fail unless both houses agree on the state police fund transfer.

Salary increases for state employes were included in the $163,000,000 appropriation bill but to make up the necessary funds, the governor proposed to transfer the State Police expenses.

Until 1947, State Police costs were paid from motor vehicle collections.

Whitworth To Run

Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., of Westernport, Saturday announced himself a candidate for State Senator in the 1954 election.

Commenting in connection with a liquor board bill introduced by Senator Robert B. Kimble and passed by the Senate, Whitworth said:

"Kimble put this bill in just to embarrass me. I told him I was going to run against him the next time. I'll beat him too."

He added: "If I get to the Senate I hope to cut out about half the powers a senator has."

In its first form the bill called for naming Walter C. Capper chairman, Stanley Hamilton and Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., as members. The chairman was to receive $3,500 and the other two members $3,000 each. The current figure is $2,000. Whitworth says $1,800 is enough.

The present board is composed of Capper, Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., and Fred Boettner.

Will Ask Rejection

After the bill was introduced Kimble proposed amending it to provide for enforcement. This would have included the hiring of inspectors and a board attorney to be paid for a 12 per cent tax on license fees.

The bill in its amended form is before the House Alcoholic Beverages Committee and Whitworth said he will ask this group to reject it.

Whitworth charged Senator Kimble is trying at the last minute to "bulldog through" the bill.

He contends that Senate confirmation of the board appointments by the Governor means that Kimble would name the members.

School Bill Defeated

A bill to prevent the Allegany County Board of Education from consolidating Central and Barton High Schools in a new building to be erected at Lonaconing has been defeated by the House of Delegates.

The bill received an unfavorable report from the Education Committee and the report was sustained.

A bill giving the City of Cumberland special taxing powers passed the Senate yesterday but was expected to be rejected by the local delegation in the House.

A Senate bill requiring the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to hire two registrars at $3,000 each for the continuous registration program passed the House. It received a 4-2 favorable report from the delegation. Whitworth and Noel Speir Cook opposed. Whitworth said the legislation is opposed by the commissioners and is not necessary as the county already has the power to setup the program. Under the bill the $3,000 salaries would be mandatory.

Bills Passed

Bills passed by the House include:

SB358—By Kimble—setting up an Allegany County civil service commission and a classified city service to embrace all officers and employes of the city, with certain exceptions.

SB473—By Kimble — Increasing the salary of the magistrate for juvenile courts in Allegany County from $2,100 to $2,400.

Negro Attends Church, Shoots Woman And Self

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP) — George Hollis, 40-year-old negro, listened attentively to the sermon at the Mount Calvary Freewill Baptist Church today, then shot a 40-year-old widow and himself with the pistol he had carried to church.

Hollis, an employe of Bethlehem Steel at its Sparrows Point plant, was dead on arrival at a hospital. He shot himself through the right ear.

Mrs. Clara Green was in serious condition with a bullet wound in the back of her neck.

William Corey, a deacon at the negro church, gave this account of the shooting:

Both Hollis and Mrs. Green had attended noon church services. Then Mrs. Green joined a group that was eating dinner at the church.

Hollis walked up to the widow at the dinner table and told her he wanted to speak to her when she was finished.

They both went to the community hall, which was empty, and a few seconds later the shots were heard.

Friends of the two said Hollis and Mrs. Green had known each other for about two years but "had a bust-up Friday night."

NLRB Orders Elections In Building Industry

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board, for the first time in its 16-year history, today ordered elections in the building industry. Eight AFL unions protested.

By its action the board assumed brand new responsibilities in the scattered construction business employing 2,000,000. The uneven nature of employment in those trades had prompted the board to keep hands off so far as employe elections are concerned, up to now.

Fire Levels Shopping Center At St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 1 (AP)—A spectacular fire, punctuated with showering bricks and explosions, destroyed most of the Highland Park shopping center in St. Paul early today.

Nine of the 17 businesses in the center, which covered an extra large city block, were destroyed. Three more were badly damaged.

City Architect Alfred H. Schroeder estimated the loss at about $1,250,000.

A fire chief and the wife of one of the store owners were injured, neither seriously. The woman's husband wasn't hurt, but an explosion shot him all the way across a wide street and under a car.

Carvel Hall Starts Fire Cleanup Job

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — Historic Carvel Hall, swept by flames Friday night, started trying hard today to clean up in time for the annual flood of midshipmen's families over June Week.

The job is repairing $200,000 damage.

The hotel, part of which was built back in 1763 by William Paca, signer of the Declaration of Independence, was seared by a burst of fire about 11 p. m. Friday night.

Many residents of the hotel rushed into the street in their night clothes. A crowd of merrymakers fled a dance in one of the ballrooms.

Four fire companies with about 200 men went to the scene. Twelve firemen were injured, three by falling through a caved-in floor. Firehoses poured streams of water into the flames until they were extinguished about 4 a. m. The last firehose was turned off at 10:30 a. m.

Baby Delivered After Mother's Death Dies

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP)—Doctors at South Baltimore General Hospital last night delivered a baby girl alive 10 minutes after her mother died of injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

But the infant died at 12:30 p. m. today.

An autopsy was being conducted to determine the exact cause of death, but a hospital spokesman said it appeared the baby's infant brain was damaged beyond recovery by lack of oxygen for 20 to 30 minutes. Its lungs also failed to expand normally, he said.

The mother 33-year-old Mrs. Alice Lepore, or near Ferndale, Md., died almost immediately after arrival at the hospital.

Martinsburg Bookies Raided; Seven Arrested

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., April 1. (AP)—Police arrested seven persons and confiscated $2,700 cash in raids at two bookmaking places here yesterday.

State Police Sergeant E. L. Roush said the biggest haul was made at a second-floor room on West Race Street. State and city police who teamed up in the raid found 61 patrons and confiscated $1,600 from a booth.

Roush identified those arrested as Mike Edison, 43, Charles Myers, 39, Giles Pifer, 50, Pat Masuto, 32, Richard F. Hook, 50, and John W. Wilt, 54. Hook is from Hagerstown, Md., the others from Martinsburg.

Danna Beeler, 45, Martinsburg, was arrested in a second raid on North Queen Street. Police found half a dozen patrons there, and confiscated $1,100 in cash.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT IS A PRE-EMPT?

IN PRACTICALLY all situations, a suit bid which is one level higher than just enough to be legal is a strength-shower to one extent or another with all good players. The degree of strength is dependent on circumstances, ranging from an opening two-bid to a single-jump overcall. Any higher suit bid — two or more above the legal minimum—is considered principally a pre-empt, an effort to shut out probably stronger opponents. Some players never make such a bid, feeling that it crowds their partners more harmfully than it bothers the other side. Some make such bids with great frequency. The middle ground is furnished by those who bid that way only when their hand is so weak in high cards that it probably can't take a solitary trick on the defense.

(Dealer: South. North - South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1. 1 ♥	1 ♠	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl
2. 1 ♥	2 ♠	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dbl
3. 1 ♥	4 ♠	Dbl

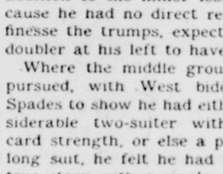

Notice the variation in the action of the West players at three tables of a duplicate game. Where the first bid only 1-Spade, he decided after the 4-Hearts that he ought to sacrifice, which he did. He was set only one trick because South's double caused him to finesse on the first round of trumps, so that he lost only two in each minor.

The West at Table 3 went the other extreme, bidding 4-Spades over the 1-Heart. He was set two tricks, losing one in trumps in addition to the minor losers, because he had no direct reason to finesse the trumps, expecting the doubler at his left to have them.

Where the middle ground was pursued, with West bidding 2-Spades to show he had either considerable two-suiter with high-card strength, or else a powerful long suit, he felt he had told his true story with a single call. So he let South's 4-Hearts pass to East and the latter cheerfully doubled. It was beaten a trick, with two in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs.

Tomorrow's Problem

For what reason do some first-class players shy away from bidding 1-No Trump on a hand like South's when vulnerable?

Additional Bills To Be Considered By Legislature

General Assembly Continues Session

The Maryland General Assembly, which had hoped to end the present session Saturday, made plans to continue today with several important measures due for consideration. Steps were also taken to iron out difficulties over the state's $163,000,000 budget.

The House and Senate named a special committee of six members to decide what to do about Governor McKeldin's proposal to transfer $1,768,600 in State Police expenses from general funds to motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin Promises Veto

The House passed the bill as written. Senate Democrats tacked on a rider which said the authority would be good only for one year. They also proposed that if the state gets any extra money after next July 1 it must be put back into the motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin said the Senate action made a "farce and a joke" of his bill and promised a veto.

The committee members are Senators Sybert (D-Howard), Preston (D-Balto 5th) and Monroe (R-Charles) and Delegates Dempsey (D-Balto 3rd), Boone (D-Balto county) and Lofstrand (R-Montgomery).

The budget itself has passed both Houses. But one part of it will fail unless both houses agree on the state police fund transfer.

Salary increases for state employes were included in the $163,000,000 appropriation bill but to make up the necessary funds, the governor proposed to transfer the State Police expenses.

Until 1947, State Police costs were paid from motor vehicle collections.

Whitworth To Run

Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., of Westernport, Saturday announced himself a candidate for State Senator in the 1954 election.

Commenting in connection with a liquor board bill introduced by Senator Robert B. Kimble and passed by the Senate, Whitworth said:

"Kimble put this bill in just to embarrass me. I told him I was going to run against him the next time. I'll beat him too."

He added: "If I get to the Senate I hope to cut out about half the powers a senator has."

In its first form the bill called for naming Walter C. Capper chairman, Stanley Hamilton and Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., as members. The chairman was to receive $3,500 and the other two members $3,000 each. The current figure is $2,000. Whitworth says $1,800 is enough.

The present board is composed of Capper, Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., and Fred Boettner.

Will Ask Rejection

After the bill was introduced Kimble proposed amending it to provide for enforcement. This would have included the hiring of inspectors and a board attorney to be paid for a 12 per cent tax on license fees.

The bill in its amended form is before the House Alcoholic Beverages Committee and Whitworth said he will ask this group to reject it.

Whitworth charged Senator Kimble is trying at the last minute to "bulldog through" the bill.

He contends that Senate confirmation of the board appointments by the Governor means that Kimble would name the members.

School Bill Defeated

A bill to prevent the Allegany County Board of Education from consolidating Central and Barton High Schools in a new building to be erected at Lonaconing has been defeated by the House of Delegates.

The bill received an unfavorable report from the Education Committee and the report was sustained.

A bill giving the City of Cumberland special taxing powers passed the Senate yesterday but was expected to be rejected by the local delegation in the House.

A Senate bill requiring the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to hire two registrars at $3,000 each for the continuous registration program passed the House. It received a 4-2 favorable report from the delegation. Whitworth and Noel Speir Cook opposed. Whitworth said the legislation is opposed by the commissioners and is not necessary as the county already has the power to setup the program. Under the bill the $3,000 salaries would be mandatory.

Bills Passed

Bills passed by the House include:

SB358—By Kimble—setting up an Allegany County civil service commission and a classified city service to embrace all officers and employes of the city, with certain exceptions.

SB473—By Kimble — Increasing the salary of the magistrate for juvenile courts in Allegany County from $2,100 to $2,400.

Negro Attends Church, Shoots Woman And Self

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP) — George Hollis, 40-year-old negro, listened attentively to the sermon at the Mount Calvary Freewill Baptist Church today, then shot a 40-year-old widow and himself with the pistol he had carried to church.

Hollis, an employe of Bethlehem Steel at its Sparrows Point plant, was dead on arrival at a hospital. He shot himself through the right ear.

Mrs. Clara Green was in serious condition with a bullet wound in the back of her neck.

William Corey, a deacon at the negro church, gave this account of the shooting:

Both Hollis and Mrs. Green had attended noon church services. Then Mrs. Green joined a group that was eating dinner at the church.

Hollis walked up to the widow at the dinner table and told her he wanted to speak to her when she was finished.

They both went to the community hall, which was empty, and a few seconds later the shots were heard.

Friends of the two said Hollis and Mrs. Green had known each other for about two years but "had a bust-up Friday night."

NLRB Orders Elections In Building Industry

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board, for the first time in its 16-year history, today ordered elections in the building industry. Eight AFL unions protested.

By its action the board assumed brand new responsibilities in the scattered construction business employing 2,000,000. The uneven nature of employment in those trades had prompted the board to keep hands off so far as employe elections are concerned, up to now.

Fire Levels Shopping Center At St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 1 (AP)—A spectacular fire, punctuated with showering bricks and explosions, destroyed most of the Highland Park shopping center in St. Paul early today.

Nine of the 17 businesses in the center, which covered an extra large city block, were destroyed. Three more were badly damaged.

City Architect Alfred H. Schroeder estimated the loss at about $1,250,000.

Carvel Hall Starts Fire Cleanup Job

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 1 (AP) — Historic Carvel Hall, swept by flames Friday night, started trying hard today to clean up in time for the annual flood of midshipmen's families over June Week.

The job is repairing $200,000 damage.

The hotel, part of which was built back in 1763 by William Paca, signer of the Declaration of Independence, was seared by a burst of fire about 11 p. m. Friday night.

Many residents of the hotel rushed into the street in their night clothes. A crowd of merrymakers fled a dance in one of the ballrooms.

Four fire companies with about 200 men went to the scene. Twelve firemen were injured, three by falling through a caved-in floor. Firehoses poured streams of water into the flames until they were extinguished about 4 a. m. The last firehose was turned off at 10:30 a. m.

Baby Delivered After Mother's Death Dies

BALTIMORE, April 1 (AP)—Doctors at South Baltimore General Hospital last night delivered a baby girl alive 10 minutes after her mother died of injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

But the infant died at 12:30 p. m. today.

An autopsy was being conducted to determine the exact cause of death, but a hospital spokesman said it appeared the baby's infant brain was damaged beyond recovery by lack of oxygen for 20 to 30 minutes. Its lungs also failed to expand normally, he said.

The mother 33-year-old Mrs. Alice Lepore, or near Ferndale, Md., died almost immediately after arrival at the hospital.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WHAT IS A PRE-EMPT?

IN PRACTICALLY all situations, a suit bid which is one level higher than just enough to be legal is a strength-shower to one extent or another with all good players. The degree of strength is dependent on circumstances, ranging from an opening two-bid to a single-jump overcall. Any higher suit bid — two or more above the legal minimum—is considered principally a pre-empt, an effort to shut out probably stronger opponents. Some players never make such a bid, feeling that it crowds their partners more harmfully than it bothers the other side. Some make such bids with great frequency. The middle ground is furnished by those who bid that way only when their hand is so weak in high cards that it probably can't take a solitary trick on the defense.

	♠ 6 5 ♥ K 8 6 4 ♦ A 10 9 7 5 ♣ 6 3
♠ A K 10 9 4 3 2 ♥ None ♦ 3 2 ♣ 10 7 4 2	N W E S	♠ 7 ♥ Q J 9 3 ♦ Q J 8 6 ♣ A 9 8 5
	♠ Q J 8 ♥ A 10 7 5 2 ♦ K 4 ♣ K Q J

(Dealer: South. North - South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1. 1 ♥	1 ♠	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥ Dbl	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
2. 1 ♥	2 ♠	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dbl
3. 1 ♥	4 ♠	Dbl

Notice the variation in the action of the West players at three tables of a duplicate game. Where the first bid only 1-Spade, he decided after the 4-Hearts that he ought to sacrifice, which he did. He was set only one trick because South's double caused him to finesse on the first round of trumps, so that he lost only two in each minor.

The West at Table 3 went the other extreme, bidding 4-Spades over the 1-Heart. He was set two tricks, losing one in trumps in addition to the minor losers, because he had no direct reason to finesse the trumps, expecting the doubler at his left to have them.

Where the middle ground was pursued, with West bidding 2-Spades to show he had either considerable two-suiter with high-card strength, or else a powerful long suit, he felt he had told his true story with a single call. So he let South's 4-Hearts pass to East and the latter cheerfully doubled. It was beaten a trick, with two in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs.

For what reason do some first-class players shy away from bidding 1-No Trump on a hand like South's when vulnerable?

Additional Bills To Be Considered By Legislature

General Assembly Continues Session

The Maryland General Assembly, which had hoped to end the present session Saturday, made plans to continue today with several important measures due for consideration. Steps were also taken to iron out difficulties over the state's $163,000,000 budget.

The House and Senate named a special committee of six members to decide what to do about Governor McKeldin's proposal to transfer $1,768,600 in State Police expenses from general funds to motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin Promises Veto

The House passed the bill as written. Senate Democrats tacked on a rider which said the authority would be good only for one year. They also proposed that if the state gets any extra money after next July 1 it must be put back into the motor vehicle funds.

McKeldin said the Senate action made a "farce and a joke" of his bill and promised a veto.

The committee members are Senators Sybert (D-Howard), Preston (D-Balto 5th) and Monroe (R-Charles) and Delegates Dempsey (D-Balto 3rd), Boone (D-Balto county) and Lofstrand (R-Montgomery).

The budget itself has passed both Houses. But one part of it will fail unless both houses agree on the state police fund transfer.

Salary increases for state employes were included in the $163,000,000 appropriation bill but to make up the necessary funds, the governor proposed to transfer the State Police expenses.

Until 1947, State Police costs were paid from motor vehicle collections.

Whitworth To Run

Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., of Westernport, Saturday announced himself a candidate for State Senator in the 1954 election.

Commenting in connection with a liquor board bill introduced by Senator Robert B. Kimble and passed by the Senate, Whitworth said:

"Kimble put this bill in just to embarrass me. I told him I was going to run against him the next time. I'll beat him too."

He added: "If I get to the Senate I hope to cut out about half the powers a senator has."

In its first form the bill called for naming Walter C. Capper chairman, Stanley Hamilton and Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., as members. The chairman was to receive $3,500 and the other two members $3,000 each. The current figure is $2,000. Whitworth says $1,800 is enough.

The present board is composed of Capper, Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., and Fred Boettner.

Will Ask Rejection

After the bill was introduced Kimble proposed amending it to provide for enforcement. This would have included the hiring of inspectors and a board attorney to be paid for a 12 per cent tax on license fees.

The bill in its amended form is before the House Alcoholic Beverages Committee and Whitworth said he will ask this group to reject it.

Whitworth charged Senator Kimble is trying at the last minute to "bulldog through" the bill.

He contends that Senate confirmation of the board appointments by the Governor means that Kimble would name the members.

School Bill Defeated

A bill to prevent the Allegany County Board of Education from consolidating Central and Barton High Schools in a new building to be erected at Lonaconing has been defeated by the House of Delegates.

The bill received an unfavorable report from the Education Committee and the report was sustained.

A bill giving the City of Cumberland special taxing powers passed the Senate yesterday but was expected to be rejected by the local delegation in the House.

A Senate bill requiring the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to hire two registrars at $3,000 each for the continuous registration program passed the House. It received a 4-2 favorable report from the delegation. Whitworth and Noel Speir Cook opposed. Whitworth said the legislation is opposed by the commissioners and is not necessary as the county already has the power to setup the program. Under the bill the $3,000 salaries would be mandatory.

Bills Passed

Bills passed by the House include:

SB358—By Kimble—setting up an Allegany County civil service commission and a classified city service to embrace all officers and employes of the city, with certain exceptions.

SB473—By Kimble — Increasing the salary of the magistrate for juvenile courts in Allegany County from $2,100 to $2,400.

April Arrives Bringing Rain

Streams Swelled But Not Dangerous

Light, intermittent showers yesterday have caused the state roads to be wet but not dangerous, State Police reported last night.

The Potomac River, at its junction with Wills Creek, reached a peak of 10.6 feet Saturday morning about 4 o'clock after steady rain fell Thursday and Friday of last week. The water began falling Saturday and dropped to 7.62 last night where it remained during the showers. Normal crest for the water at this time of year is about 4 feet.

No high water was reported elsewhere in the Tri-State Area with temperatures "in the fifties" at Elkins and Connellsville and other points on the Western Maryland Railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio reported everything "normal" with no high water and the Potomac River stationary. Temperatures of 46 with light rain were noted in Terra Alta, W. Va., while the thermometer rose to 50 with rain along Orleans Road.

No warnings have been issued by State Police although a close lookout is being kept on condition of the roads.

Driver School Aids Motorists

The Driver Education department of Fort Hill High School recently completed a survey of automobile accidents and results have been announced by Alfred Fritz, instructor.

Among former driving training students it was found that 19 per cent of the boys and 5 per cent of the girls had minor accidents that required no police action or medical attention. Compared to this, the report showed, 35 per cent of boys and 23 per cent of girls who had no driver training had similar accidents.

Also noted in the survey was that three per cent of driver training students had major accidents compared to seven per cent of drivers having no training. Three per cent of trained students and 29 per cent without training were warned by police for motor violations.

The student trainees have an excellent record with no arrests, the survey revealed, although 12 per cent of those without training were arrested.

State Parks In This Area Being Opened

Improvements Noted To Picnic Grounds

Officially, there is no opening date for Western Maryland recreation areas operated by the Department of State Forests and Parks, District Forester William H. Johnson said yesterday.

However, the forester added, motorists are free to enjoy the facilities as soon as balmy spring weather proves inviting.

Johnson noted that a number of additions have been made in Garrett and Allegany counties since last summer. About 75 new picnic tables have been added at the three areas in Garrett county, bringing to about 300 the number available. These areas are Swallow Falls, six miles northwest of Oakland; Herrington Manor, about five miles in the same direction from Oakland, and New Germany, five miles south of U. S. Route 40, not far from Grantsville.

At Swallow Falls, in addition, a new picnic pavilion will be completed in a few weeks.

Meanwhile, improvements are being made by the Department of State Forests and Parks in the new Dan's Mountain recreation area, near Lonaconing, here in Allegany county. Five new picnic tables have been installed and Johnson hopes that new fireplaces will be ready soon. This is the first year's operation for this facility.

Other places for nature-lovers are within easy driving distance in Washington and Frederick counties, Johnson noted. Nearest of these is historic Fort Frederick, five miles south of Clear Spring in Washington county. This old fort was built in 1756. A museum, about 40 picnic tables and nine fire places are there.

Also found in Washington county are the Washington Monument State Park, two miles east of Boonsboro, and Gathland State Park at Crampton Gap on State Highway No. 572. In Frederick county there is Gambrill State Park six miles northwest of Frederick.

City Firemen Continue Training

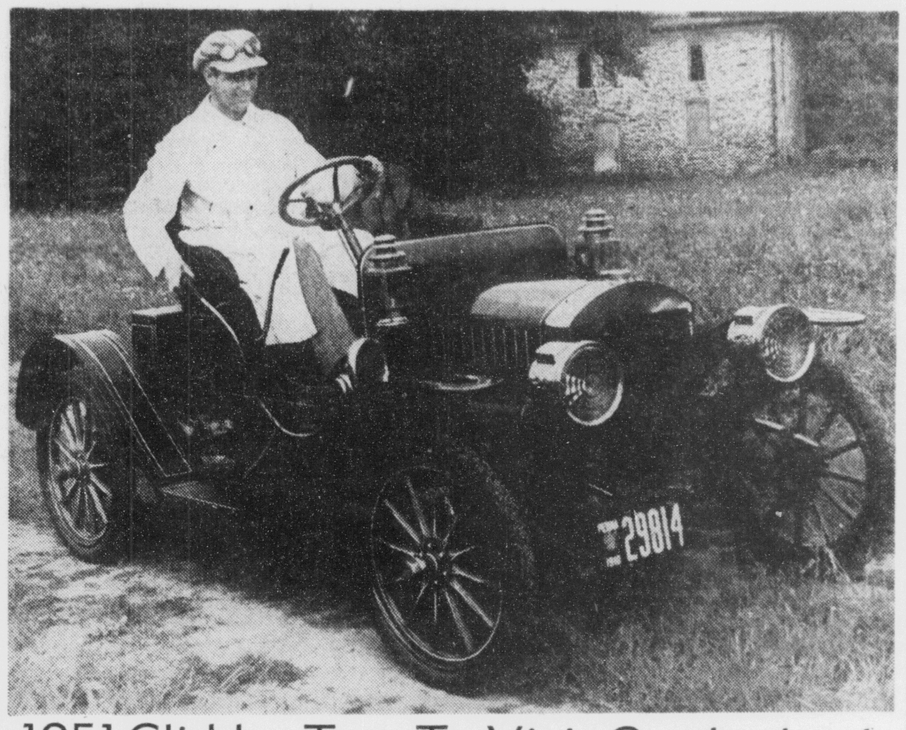

City firemen staged the second in a series of Sunday morning practice drills yesterday between 9:30 and 11 o'clock at the Footer Building, South Mechanic Street.

A team of 12 men, three from each of the companies, operated the huge hook and ladder truck. Ladder evolutions were part of the program and heavy streams were trained on the street.

As the program progresses all members of the fire department will receive practical training.

More Tags Available

Ernest B. Treat, Allegany County tax collector, said last night the local office had received an additional 1,000 Maryland auto license tags Saturday which will be available to motorists this week. The tax collector's office sold approximately 325 more tags Saturday.

Residents of Cumberland will witness an invasion of early vintage vehicles during the month of September. Yes, a galaxy of antiquated automobiles from years gone by will chug into town and present a sight to behold.

Pleasant memories certainly will be recalled by the older residents and the younger set will "get a charge" from seeing the brass bedecked beauties which put in their appearance just after the turn of the century.

The planned invasion of the city is part of the Glidden Tour being sponsored this year by the Antique Auto Club of America with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Tentative Plans Set

Leslie R. Henry, assistant chairman of the tour committee has notified the Allegheny Mountain Region, to which Cumberland members belong, that the tentative plans are almost complete for the early fall event.

At least four or more members of Cumberland, who possess these ancient variety autos, will take part. On September 22 the participants will assemble in Pittsburgh, Pa., for an evening "Kickoff Dinner." Cars will be checked in at the Webster Hall Hotel.

The caravan will leave the "Iron City" at 9 a. m. Sunday, follow the Old National Highway for a distance of 120 miles and pull into Cumberland sometime during the afternoon. Members of the Allegheny Mountain Region will play host and show the tourists a rousing good time.

Goes To Bedford

On Monday the group will start up the motors, adjust their goggles, button their coats and drive over the Macadam Country Road to Bedford, Pa., a distance of 40 miles. Here they will be feted at Bedford Springs.

After departing from the Springs the travellers will journey over the Turnpike to Harrisburg, Pa., or Carlisle, Pa. The following day they will leave for a trip through the heart of the Pocono Mountains and will stop off at Skytop Inn where the banquet officially ending the tour will be held. Awards for the tour will also be presented. On Friday the tour will come to a close and the motorists will return home.

Around 99 cars from 14 states and one Canadian province participated in last years tour which originated in Lake Placid, N. Y., went up through Canada to Montreal and back down through Watertown, N. Y., to Rochester, N. Y., where it ended.

Old Relics Enter

Last year's journey was sponsored by the Veterans Motor Car Club of America with headquarters in Boston, Mass. The two clubs take alternate turns in putting on the Glidden Tour.

Included among the cars in the 1950 tour were a 1901 Oldsmobile Roadster, a 1903 Ford Touring Car, a 1903 Oldsmobile Roadster and a 1904 Rambler.

A city member recently made the statement "that all the entries completed the scheduled trip" despite the lack of hydraulic gear shift, nylon seat covers, jet exhaust pipes, built-in ashtrays and glove compartments.

Today's Sermonette

"Thomas Answered and said unto Him, my Lord and my God." St. John 20:28.

By REV. RAYMOND A. FAULDS, Jr.

Today's sermonette is a digest of the sermon delivered yesterday at Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church by the pastor, Rev. Raymond A. Faulds, Jr. The sermon digests are being prepared through the cooperation of the Cumberland Ministerial Association.

Thomas, The Skeptic

OUR TEXT occurs at the moment when all doubts and skepticism were dispelled from the mind of Thomas and he accepts Jesus as his "Risen Saviour." St. John's account of the appearance of Christ to Thomas occurred eight days following the resurrection. The presence of Jesus had first appeared to the disciples on the evening of the resurrection. At this time, however, Thomas was among the group. Thomas refused to accept the words of the disciples. He appears as one who bases his faith upon ocular miracles. He is a "realist" and represents the materialistic attitude towards the resurrection body of Christ. Tradition has made Thomas a label. He was the doubter, the skeptic in the band of disciples. Yet the Gospel facts reveal that this characteristic was not because he lacked courage but because he refused to use his energies on trifles. In the time of crisis he was not found wanting. He was a man of courage and devotion.

Rev. Faulds

Our Gospel relates several accounts of his character. First, there was the time when Lazarus lay dead at Bethany. Jesus wanted to go to Bethany to comfort the sisters. The disciples were afraid for they knew that such a trip was bound to be dangerous. Jesus was also aware of this fact. However, it was Thomas who said, "Come, let us go, that we may die with Him." Again, we can see the real character of Thomas at the time of the Last Supper. Jesus was telling the disciples that He must go to do the will of the Father. On that occasion Thomas said: "We know not whither Thou goest; and how can we know the way?" He was not asking for information. Rather he was announcing a great loyalty. On still another occasion we meet Thomas and get an insight into his character. It was at the resurrection of Jesus. Thomas refused to be convinced by secondhand knowledge. This is skepticism. Yet Jesus did not resent it.

Doubt can never prevent a first-hand experience of Christ. Augustine accepted Christianity only after he had been assured by Ambrose, with all of the authority of the Church behind him, that the crude and immoral Bible stories did not have to be believed literally. This is skepticism. Thomas was a thoroughgoing skeptic according to this standard. Yet he was religious. His faith went deeper than his beliefs. His immaturity of mind was constantly outrun by his precocity of heart.

Thomas, the skeptic, had a tragic sense of life, as all real skeptics do. He saw no city of God in the midst of a falling world. He saw no goal; he did not even see the way at last, only the scars of a suffering Saviour, and he took him for his God. His religion was "the fellowship of his sufferings."

A unique thing about man is his capacity for suffering. An animal will suffer pains of the flesh, but only man can suffer the pains of yesterday through his conscience.

There is no virtue in suffering itself. There is no virtue in a sentimental view of the cross. But there is much worth while in an agonized spirit which shares the sufferings of the human race. If this age is to rise above itself it will do so only because it has a part in this "fellowship of His sufferings." The doctrine of the cross is not a formula to be grasped by the mind, but a principle to be practiced in life. The hope of mankind lies along the line of fruitful intelligence and sensible suffering.

Fort Hill Boys Hi-Y Ends First Half Year Plans

New Officers To Be Elected On April 19

Attendance at Easter sunrise services at Fort Hill last week marked the end of the Fort Hill Boys' Hi-Y extra activities for the first session of the year. New officers will be elected April 19 and second half activities will begin, Richard Dailey, president of the club, said.

This year marks the first time the members of the Boys' Hi-Y have divided their program into two parts. The first half began in October. The system was designed so that the club would be progressive and active at the beginning of each school year without delay.

The organization for a new school year actually takes place the previous April and only juniors or sophomores are eligible to hold office at the time.

"This year the club has had a very successful and well rounded program under the new setup," Dailey related. "We have participated in civic, recreational and religious activities."

Some of the outstanding work done by the group included a program of interdenominational speakers representing the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic religions; a semi-formal Salute Dance honoring the graduates who went into the armed services; Thanksgiving Day church attendance; sending a student with all expenses paid to the United Nations; participation in Youth and Government Forums; distributing Community Chest posters; selling Thanksgiving Day programs; presenting the Hi-Y and Faculty basketball game.

Other activities included contributing to a movie projector for the YMCA presenting a sound, technicolor religious motion picture, "The Pilgrimage Play," and sponsoring a basketball team in the City Rec League.

Present officers of the group are Dailey, William Thuss, vice president; Donald Brake, chaplain; John Parks, treasurer; Robert DeHaven, secretary; Davis Ferguson, historian; and Jack Corrick, sergeant-at-arms.

District vice commander Vernon Crable and Judge Advocate Peter J. Carpenti assisted Commander Murray, who presided.

Suspect Arson In Mine Fire Near Kingwood

$25,000 Blaze Stops Coal Production

KINGWOOD, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — A fire which caused an estimated $25,000 damage to a non-union coal company's tipple today was labeled a "plain case of arson" by Kingwood Fire Chief Scott Bundorf.

Bundorf, who made the damage estimate, said the blaze destroyed most of the tipple and tipple equipment at the Borgman Coal Company, located three miles south of Kingwood between old State Route 26 and new State Route 26.

State Police began an investigation, but reported that they still were unable late today to inspect the tipple ruins closely because of intense heat.

Bundorf said the fire was discovered about 7:45 a.m. by taxi driver Charles Latham of Tunnelton, who called the Kingwood Volunteer Fire Department. The fire chief said the structure was nearly demolished, however, by the time firemen arrived.

Mine Superintendent Fred Bobo said the mine normally employs 120 men. A smaller force has been working recently, however, because of picketing activities.

Bobo said that a ramp and part of a bin were all that were saved from the tipple and its equipment.

The state fire marshal's office was expected to send a representative here tomorrow to conduct an investigation.

Miners Take Traditional Holiday

Coal miners in 27 coal producing states are honoring the man who won them the eight-hour day by remaining away from work today on a contractual holiday.

"John Mitchell Day" is celebrated in the bituminous (soft coal) fields each April 1. Since the holiday fell on a Sunday, the nation's 400,000 diggers celebrate the day today.

Mitchell, an early president of the United Mine Workers, is honored by the miners for his achievement 53 years ago in winning the men an eight-hour day.

Speechmaking, parades and music will highlight celebrations throughout the coal fields. Two big rallies are planned in the Pittsburgh District—one in nearby New Kensington and the other at Monongahela. West Virginia miners plan another program at Clarksburg.

Union miners in the Tri-State Area are participating in the general holiday observance, but no formal celebration has been scheduled.

Area Resident Injured In Fall

William Mower, 66, RFD No. 2, Bedford Road, an employee of the Community Baking Company, is in a "fairly comfortable" condition at Allegany Hospital where he had been admitted Saturday at 12:30 p. m. for injuries received in a fall from a ladder while at work.

X-rays have been taken but hospital attaches last night were unable to give a full report on the extent of his injuries.

He received possible fractured skull, brain concussion and back injuries according to hospital authorities. Bakery officials said he was climbing down the ladder when it slipped out from under him.

In another accident Saturday, Bonnie W. Wilhelm, 8-year-old daughter of Carl H. Wilhelm, RFD No. 3, was taken to Allegany Hospital where she was X-rayed for possible skull injuries, after the car driven by her father collided with another driven by P. E. Hause, Somerset, Pa., at the intersection of Frederick and Decatur Streets.

Riding in Wilhelm's vehicle were his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ethel Wilhelm, and her two daughters Margaret, 7, X-rayed for nose injuries and Betty J., 5, X-rayed for chin injuries. The woman and drivers escaped injury.

Both drivers were arrested on careless driving charges by city police and will be tried in Police Court April 14.

Wave Of Thefts Continues In Cumberland

Police Probing Recent Burglaries

Charles Abbott, attendant at the Holland Service Station, corner of Mechanic and Bedford Streets, told City Detective Ernest M. Powell last evening that a man took between 20 and 30 dollars from the station's cash register.

Police were notified at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. Abbott said that a man came to the service station to inquire about parking rates. He entered the station and in the meantime Abbott left to wait on another customer.

Upon his return, Abbott said, the man had left and when he opened the register for change for the customer, the bills and some change had been taken.

Detective Powell is continuing an investigation.

Police are also investigating the theft of approximately $200 from the home of Franklin Jolley, 9 South Allegany Street.

Detective Thomas J. See said the burglar left behind a considerable amount of money after gaining entrance through a cellar door between 12:30 p.m. Thursday and 5:35 p.m. Friday.

After forcing a key from a door leading to the floor above, the intruder pried open a cedar chest containing a strong box.

Also under investigation is a breaking and entering attempt at the Cut Rate Shoe Store, 165 Baltimore Street. A would-be burglar removed putty from around a pane of glass but was unable to reach the lock inside.

Police said the entry attempt was made on the second floor of the building, which houses two apartments.

Authorities noted the culprit gathered up the putty and glass when he left.

Reforestation Keeps Watershed In Top Condition

Some 15,000 pine trees will be planted in the Lake Gordon section as part of a program to keep the watershed of the Evitts Creek Water Company in top condition, George M. Hitchcock, superintendent, announced yesterday.

The three-year-old trees include white pine, hemlock, and red pine furnished by the Pennsylvania Department of Forest and Waters at a nominal cost in connection with the reforestation plan at the watershed.

Hitchcock said the trees arrived this week and were heeled in to await planting during the next two weeks.

The trees will be planted in the area south and east of Lake Gordon to replace second growth timber cut down this year under the direction of the Pennsylvania and Maryland forestry departments.

In connection with a plan of woodlot management, some 312,000 board feet of timber will be cut down in 1952 on land of the Evitts Creek Water Company.

In past years, lumber for the company's use has been secured free as a result of deals with sawers who cut down and prepare stumpage on a percentage basis.

The property has also yielded a considerable amount of lumber for the City of Cumberland, Hitchcock said.

About 2,500 of the 4,000 acres of property owned by the Evitts Creek Water Company is in woodland.

Hitchcock explained that the maintenance of a good stand of timber on the watershed is vital to Cumberland's water supply.

Were forests to become depleted, erosion would set in, allowing the rapid run off of water which would be vitally needed during dry months.

Vigorous growths of timber and other vegetation, Hitchcock said, literally soak up the water during wet spells and dole it out gradually, so an adequate flow of water into the dams is assured.

April Arrives Bringing Rain

Streams Swelled But Not Dangerous

Light, intermittent showers yesterday have caused the state roads to be wet but not dangerous, State Police reported last night.

The Potomac River, at its junction with Wills Creek, reached a peak of 10.6 feet Saturday morning about 4 o'clock after steady rain fell Thursday and Friday of last week. The water began falling Saturday and dropped to 7.62 last night where it remained during the showers. Normal crest for the water at this time of year is about 4 feet.

No high water was reported elsewhere in the Tri-State Area with temperatures "in the fifties" at Elkins and Connellsville and other points on the Western Maryland Railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio reported everything "normal" with no high water and the Potomac River stationary. Temperatures of 46 with light rain were noted in Terra Alta, W. Va., while the thermometer rose to 50 with rain along Orleans Road.

No warnings have been issued by State Police although a close lookout is being kept on condition of the roads.

Driver School Aids Motorists

The Driver Education department of Fort Hill High School recently completed a survey of automobile accidents and results have been announced by Alfred Fritz, instructor.

Among former driving training students it was found that 19 per cent of the boys and 5 per cent of the girls had minor accidents that required no police action or medical attention. Compared to this, the report showed, 35 per cent of boys and 23 per cent of girls who had no driver training had similar accidents.

Also noted in the survey was that three per cent of driver training students had major accidents compared to seven per cent of drivers having no training. Three per cent of trained students and 29 per cent without training were warned by police for motor violations.

The student trainees have an excellent record with no arrests, the survey revealed, although 12 per cent of those without training were arrested.

State Parks In This Area Being Opened

Improvements Noted To Picnic Grounds

Officially, there is no opening date for Western Maryland recreation areas operated by the Department of State Forests and Parks, District Forester William H. Johnson said yesterday.

However, the forester added, motorists are free to enjoy the facilities as soon as balmy spring weather proves inviting.

Johnson noted that a number of additions have been made in Garrett and Allegany counties since last summer. About 75 new picnic tables have been added at the three areas in Garrett county, bringing to about 300 the number available. These areas are Swallow Falls, six miles northwest of Oakland; Herrington Manor, about five miles in the same direction from Oakland, and New Germany, five miles south of U. S. Route 40, not far from Grantsville.

At Swallow Falls, in addition, a new picnic pavilion will be completed in a few weeks.

Meanwhile, improvements are being made by the Department of State Forests and Parks in the new Dan's Mountain recreation area, near Lonaconing, here in Allegany county. Five new picnic tables have been installed and Johnson hopes that new fireplaces will be ready soon. This is the first year's operation for this facility.

Other places for nature-lovers are within easy driving distance in Washington and Frederick counties, Johnson noted. Nearest of these is historic Fort Frederick, five miles south of Clear Spring in Washington county. This old fort was built in 1756. A museum, about 40 picnic tables and nine fire places are there.

Also found in Washington county are the Washington Monument State Park, two miles east of Boonsboro, and Gathland State Park at Crampton Gap on State Highway No. 572. In Frederick county there is Gambrill State Park six miles northwest of Frederick.

City Firemen Continue Training

City firemen staged the second in a series of Sunday morning practice drills yesterday between 9:30 and 11 o'clock at the Footer Building, South Mechanic Street.

A team of 12 men, three from each of the companies, operated the huge hook and ladder truck. Ladder evolutions were part of the program and heavy streams were trained on the street.

As the program progresses all members of the fire department will receive practical training.

Ernest B. Treat, Allegany County tax collector, said last night the local office had received an additional 1,000 Maryland auto license tags Saturday which will be available to motorists this week. The tax collector's office sold approximately 325 more tags Saturday.

Theodore T. Sansbury In Critical Condition

Theodore T. Sansbury, a former resident of Cumberland who was injured in an automobile accident at Parkersburg, W. Va., Wednesday, was reported in a very critical condition late last night.

Sansbury was thrown against the wheel of the car which he was driving when his machine collided with another car driven by Dr. Harold Ulch, also of Parkersburg.

Today's Sermonette

"Thomas Answered and said unto Him, my Lord and my God." St. John 20:28.

By REV. RAYMOND A. FAULDS, Jr.

Today's sermonette is a digest of the sermon delivered yesterday at Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church by the pastor, Rev. Raymond A. Faulds, Jr. The sermon digests are being prepared through the cooperation of the Cumberland Ministerial Association.

Thomas, The Skeptic

OUR TEXT occurs at the moment when all doubts and skepticism were dispelled from the mind of Thomas and he accepts Jesus as his "Risen Saviour." St. John's account of the appearance of Christ to Thomas occurred eight days following the resurrection. The presence of Jesus had first appeared to the disciples on the evening of the resurrection. At this time, however, Thomas was not among the group. Thomas refused to accept the words of the disciples. He appears as one who bases his faith upon ocular miracles. He is a "realist" and represents the materialistic attitude towards the resurrection body of Christ. Tradition has made Thomas a label. He was the doubter, the skeptic in the band of disciples. Yet the Gospel facts reveal that this characteristic was not because he lacked courage but because he refused to use his energies on trifles. In the time of crisis he was not found wanting. He was a man of courage and devotion.

Rev. Faulds

Our Gospel relates several accounts of his character. First, there was the time when Lazarus lay dead at Bethany. Jesus wanted to go to Bethany to comfort the sisters. The disciples were afraid for they knew that such a trip was bound to be dangerous. Jesus was also aware of this fact. However, it was Thomas who said, "Come, let us go, that we may die with Him." Again, we can see the real character of Thomas at the time of the Last Supper. Jesus was telling the disciples that He must go to do the will of the Father. On that occasion Thomas said: "We know not whither Thou goest; and how can we know the way?" He was not asking for information. Rather he was announcing a great loyalty. On still another occasion we meet Thomas and get an insight into his character. It was at the resurrection of Jesus. Thomas refused to be convinced by secondhand knowledge. This is skepticism. Yet Jesus did not resent it.

Doubt can never prevent a first-hand experience of Christ. Augustine accepted Christianity only after he had been assured by Ambrose, with all of the authority of the Church behind him, that the crude and immoral Bible stories did not have to be believed literally. This is skepticism. Thomas was a thoroughgoing skeptic according to this standard. Yet he was religious. His faith went deeper than his beliefs. His immaturity of mind was constantly outrun by his precocity of heart.

Thomas, the skeptic, had a tragic sense of life, as all real skeptics do. He saw no city of God in the midst of a falling world. He saw no goal; he did not even see the way at last, only the scars of a suffering Saviour, and he took him for his God. His religion was "the fellowship of his sufferings."

A unique thing about man is his capacity for suffering. An animal will suffer pains of the flesh, but only man can suffer the pains of yesterday through his conscience.

There is no virtue in suffering itself. There is no virtue in a sentimental view of the cross. But there is much worth while in an agonized spirit which shares the sufferings of the human race. If this age is to rise above itself it will do so only because it has a part in this "fellowship of His sufferings." The doctrine of the cross is not a formula to be grasped by the mind, but a principle to be practiced in life. The hope of mankind lies along the line of fruitful intelligence and sensible suffering.

Fort Hill Boys Hi-Y Ends First Half Year Plans

New Officers To Be Elected On April 19

Attendance at Easter sunrise services at Fort Hill last week marked the end of the Fort Hill Boys' Hi-Y extra activities for the first session of the year. New officers will be elected April 19 and second half activities will begin, Richard Dailey, president of the club, said.

This year marks the first time the members of the Boys' Hi-Y have divided their program into two parts. The first half began in October. The system was designed so that the club would be progressive and active at the beginning of each school year without delay.

The organization for a new school year actually takes place the previous April and only juniors or sophomores are eligible to hold office at the time.

"This year the club has had a very successful and well rounded program under the new setup," Dailey related. "We have participated in civic, recreational and religious activities."

Some of the outstanding work done by the group included a program of interdenominational speakers representing the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic religions; a semi-formal Salute Dance honoring the graduates who went into the armed services; Thanksgiving Day church attendance; sending a student with all expenses paid to the United Nations; participation in Youth and Government Forums; distributing Community Chest posters; selling Thanksgiving Day programs; presenting the Hi-Y and Faculty basketball game.

Other activities included contributing to a movie projector for the YMCA presenting a sound, technicolor religious motion picture, "The Pilgrimage Play," and sponsoring a basketball team in the City Rec League.

Present officers of the group are Dailey, William Thuss, vice president; Donald Brake, chaplain; John Parks, treasurer; Robert DeHaven, secretary; Davis Ferguson, historian; and Jack Corrick, sergeant-at-arms.

Also attending were post commanders of seven of the nine posts in the district. They included posts from Cumberland, Lonaconing, Oakland, Mt. Savage, Friendsville, Oldtown, and McCoole. Hagerstown and Frostburg posts were not represented.

District vice commander Vernon Crable and Judge Advocate Peter J. Carpenti assisted Commander Murray, who presided.

Suspect Arson In Mine Fire Near Kingwood

$25,000 Blaze Stops Coal Production

KINGWOOD, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — A fire which caused an estimated $25,000 damage to a non-union coal company's tipple today was labeled a "plain case of arson" by Kingwood Fire Chief Scott Bundorf.

Bundorf, who made the damage estimate, said the blaze destroyed most of the tipple and tipple equipment at the Borgman Coal Company, located three miles south of Kingwood between old State Route 26 and new State Route 26.

State Police began an investigation, but reported that they still were unable late today to inspect the tipple ruins closely because of intense heat.

Bundorf said the fire was discovered about 7:45 a.m. by taxi driver Charles Latham of Tunnelton, who called the Kingwood Volunteer Fire Department. The fire chief said the structure was nearly demolished, however, by the time firemen arrived.

Mine Superintendent Fred Bobo said the mine normally employs 120 men. A smaller force has been working recently, however, because of picketing activities.

Bobo said that a ramp and part of a bin were all that were saved from the tipple and its equipment.

The state fire marshal's office was expected to send a representative here tomorrow to conduct an investigation.

Miners Take Traditional Holiday

Coal miners in 27 coal producing states are honoring the man who won them the eight-hour day by remaining away from work today on a contractual holiday.

"John Mitchell Day" is celebrated in the bituminous (soft coal) fields each April 1. Since the holiday fell on a Sunday, the nation's 400,000 diggers celebrate the day today.

Mitchell, an early president of the United Mine Workers, is honored by the miners for his achievement 53 years ago in winning the men an eight-hour day.

Speechmaking, parades and music will highlight celebrations throughout the coal fields. Two big rallies are planned in the Pittsburgh District—one in nearby New Kensington and the other at Monongahela. West Virginia miners plan another program at Clarksburg.

Union miners in the Tri-State Area are participating in the general holiday observance, but no formal celebration has been scheduled.

Area Resident Injured In Fall

William Mower, 66, RFD No. 2, Bedford Road, an employee of the Community Baking Company, is in a "fairly comfortable" condition at Allegany Hospital where he had been admitted Saturday at 12:30 p. m. for injuries received in a fall from a ladder while at work.

X-rays have been taken but hospital attaches last night were unable to give a full report on the extent of his injuries.

He received possible fractured skull, brain concussion and back injuries according to hospital authorities. Bakery officials said he was climbing down the ladder when it slipped out from under him.

In another accident Saturday, Bonnie W. Wilhelm, 8-year-old daughter of Carl H. Wilhelm, RFD No. 3, was taken to Allegany Hospital where she was X-rayed for possible skull injuries, after the car driven by her father collided with another driven by P. E. Hause, Somerset, Pa., at the intersection of Frederick and Decatur Streets.

Riding in Wilhelm's vehicle were his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ethel Wilhelm, and her two daughters Margaret, 7, X-rayed for nose injuries and Betty J., 5, X-rayed for chin injuries. The woman and drivers escaped injury.

Both drivers were arrested on careless driving charges by city police and will be tried in Police Court April 14.

Wave Of Thefts Continues In Cumberland

Police Probing Recent Burglaries

Another in the current wave of thefts has been reported to city police.

Charles Abbott, attendant at the Holland Service Station, corner of Mechanic and Bedford Streets, told City Detective Ernest M. Powell last evening that a man took between 20 and 30 dollars from the station's cash register.

Police were notified at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. Abbott said that a man came to the service station to inquire about parking rates. He entered the station and in the meantime Abbott left to wait on another customer.

Upon his return, Abbott said, the man had left and when he opened the register for change for the customer, the bills and some change had been taken.

Detective Powell is continuing an investigation.

Police are also investigating the theft of approximately $200 from the home of Franklin Jolley, 9 South Allegany Street.

Detective Thomas J. See said the burglar left behind a considerable amount of money after gaining entrance through a cellar door between 12:30 p.m. Thursday and 5:35 p.m. Friday.

After forcing a key from a door leading to the floor above, the intruder pried open a cedar chest containing a strong box.

Also under investigation is a breaking and entering attempt at the Cut Rate Shoe Store, 165 Baltimore Street. A would-be burglar removed putty from around a pane of glass but was unable to reach the lock inside.

Police said the entry attempt was made on the second floor of the building, which houses two apartments.

Authorities noted the culprit gathered up the putty and glass when he left.

Reforestation Keeps Watershed In Top Condition

Some 15,000 pine trees will be planted in the Lake Gordon section as part of a program to keep the watershed of the Evitts Creek Water Company in top condition, George M. Hitchcock, superintendent, announced yesterday.

The three-year-old trees include white pine, hemlock, and red pine furnished by the Pennsylvania Department of Forest and Waters at a nominal cost in connection with the reforestation plan at the watershed.

Hitchcock said the trees arrived this week and were heeled in to await planting during the next two weeks.

The trees will be planted in the area south and east of Lake Gordon to replace second growth timber cut down this year under the direction of the Pennsylvania and Maryland forestry departments.

In connection with a plan of woodlot management, some 312,000 board feet of timber will be cut down in 1952 on land of the Evitts Creek Water Company.

In past years, lumber for the company's use has been secured free as a result of deals with sawers who cut down and prepare stumpage on a percentage basis.

The property has also yielded a considerable amount of lumber for the City of Cumberland, Hitchcock said.

About 2,500 of the 4,000 acres of property owned by the Evitts Creek Water Company is in woodland.

Hitchcock explained that the maintenance of a good stand of timber on the watershed is vital to Cumberland's water supply.

Were forests to become depleted, erosion would set in, allowing the rapid run off of water which would be vitally needed during dry months.

Vigorous growths of timber and other vegetation, Hitchcock said, literally soak up the water during wet spells and dole it out gradually, so an adequate flow of water into the dams is assured.

State Parks In This Area Being Opened

Improvements Noted To Picnic Grounds

Officially, there is no opening date for Western Maryland recreation areas operated by the Department of State Forests and Parks, District Forester William H. Johnson said yesterday.

However, the forester added, motorists are free to enjoy the facilities as soon as balmy spring weather proves inviting.

Johnson noted that a number of additions have been made in Garrett and Allegany counties since last summer. About 75 new picnic tables have been added at the three areas in Garrett county, bringing to about 300 the number available. These areas are Swallow Falls, six miles northwest of Oakland; Herrington Manor, about five miles in the same direction from Oakland, and New Germany, five miles south of U. S. Route 40, not far from Grantsville.

At Swallow Falls, in addition, a new picnic pavilion will be completed in a few weeks.

Meanwhile, improvements are being made by the Department of State Forests and Parks in the new Dan's Mountain recreation area, near Lonaconing, here in Allegany county. Five new picnic tables have been installed and Johnson hopes that new fireplaces will be ready soon. This is the first year's operation for this facility.

Other places for nature-lovers are within easy driving distance in Washington and Frederick counties, Johnson noted. Nearest of these is historic Fort Frederick, five miles south of Clear Spring in Washington county. This old fort was built in 1756. A museum, about 40 picnic tables and nine fire places are there.

Also found in Washington county are the Washington Monument State Park, two miles east of Boonsboro, and Gathland State Park at Crampton Gap on State Highway No. 572. In Frederick county there is Gambrill State Park six miles northwest of Frederick.

City Firemen Continue Training

City firemen staged the second in a series of Sunday morning practice drills yesterday between 9:30 and 11 o'clock at the Footer Building, South Mechanic Street.

A team of 12 men, three from each of the companies, operated the huge hook and ladder truck. Ladder evolutions were part of the program and heavy streams were trained on the street.

As the program progresses all members of the fire department will receive practical training.

More Tags Available

Ernest B. Treat, Allegany County tax collector, said last night the local office had received an additional 1,000 Maryland auto license tags Saturday which will be available to motorists this week. The tax collector's office sold approximately 325 more tags Saturday.

April Arrives Bringing Rain

Streams Swelled But Not Dangerous

Light, intermittent showers yesterday have caused the state roads to be wet but not dangerous, State Police reported last night.

The Potomac River, at its junction with Wills Creek, reached a peak of 10.6 feet Saturday morning about 4 o'clock after steady rain fell Thursday and Friday of last week. The water began falling Saturday and dropped to 7.62 last night where it remained during the showers. Normal crest for the water at this time of year is about 4 feet.

No high water was reported elsewhere in the Tri-State Area with temperatures "in the fifties" at Elkins and Connellsville and other points on the Western Maryland Railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio reported everything "normal" with no high water and the Potomac River stationary. Temperatures of 46 with light rain were noted in Terra Alta, W. Va., while the thermometer rose to 50 with rain along Orleans Road.

No warnings have been issued by State Police although a close lookout is being kept on condition of the roads.

Driver School Aids Motorists

The Driver Education department of Fort Hill High School recently completed a survey of automobile accidents and results have been announced by Alfred Fritz, instructor.

Among former driving training students it was found that 19 per cent of the boys and 5 per cent of the girls had minor accidents that required no police action or medical attention. Compared to this, the report showed, 35 per cent of boys and 23 per cent of girls who had no driver training had similar accidents.

Also noted in the survey was that three per cent of driver training students had major accidents compared to seven per cent of drivers having no training. Three per cent of trained students and 29 per cent without training were warned by police for motor violations.

The student trainees have an excellent record with no arrests, the survey revealed, although 12 per cent of those without training were arrested.

1951 Glidden Tour To Visit Cumberland

Antiquated Autos To Make Appearance In Cumberland

By CHARLES H. KELLY
News Staff Writer

Residents of Cumberland will witness an invasion of early vintage vehicles during the month of September. Yes, a galaxy of antiquated automobiles from years gone by will chug into town and present a sight to behold.

Pleasant memories certainly will be recalled by the older residents and the younger set will "get a charge" from seeing the brass bedecked beauties which put in their appearance just after the turn of the century.

The planned invasion of the city is part of the Glidden Tour being sponsored this year by the Antique Auto Club of America with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Tentative Plans Set

Leslie R. Henry, assistant chairman of the tour committee has notified the Allegheny Mountain Region, to which Cumberland members belong, that the tentative plans are almost complete for the early fall event.

At least four or more members of Cumberland, who possess these ancient variety autos, will take part. On September 22 the participants will assemble in Pittsburgh, Pa., for an evening "Kickoff Dinner." Cars will be checked in at the Webster Hall Hotel.

The caravan will leave the "Iron City" at 9 a. m. Sunday, follow the Old National Highway for a distance of 120 miles and pull into Cumberland sometime during the afternoon. Members of the Allegheny Mountain Region will play host and show the tourists a rousing good time.

Goes To Bedford

On Monday the group will start up the motors, adjust their goggles, button their coats and drive over the Macadam Country Road to Bedford, Pa., a distance of 40 miles. Here they will be feted at Bedford Springs.

After departing from the Springs the travellers will journey over the Turnpike to Harrisburg, Pa., or Carlisle, Pa. The following day they will leave for a trip through the heart of the Pocono Mountains and will stop off at Skytop Inn where the banquet officially ending the tour will be held. Awards for the tour will also be presented. On Friday the tour will come to a close and the motorists will return home.

Around 99 cars from 14 states and one Canadian province participated in last years tour which originated in Lake Placid, N. Y., went up through Canada to Montreal and back down through Watertown, N. Y., to Rochester, N. Y., where it ended.

Old Relics Enter

Last year's journey was sponsored by the Veterans Motor Car Club of America with headquarters in Boston, Mass. The two clubs take alternate turns in putting on the Glidden Tour.

Included among the cars in the 1950 tour were a 1901 Oldsmobile Roadster, a 1903 Ford Touring Car, a 1903 Oldsmobile Roadster and a 1904 Rambler.

A city member recently made the statement "that all the entries completed the scheduled trip" despite the lack of hydraulic gear shift, nylon seat covers, jet exhaust pipes, built-in ashtrays and glove compartments.

There is no virtue in suffering itself. There is no virtue in a sentimental view of the cross. But there is much worth while in an agonized spirit which shares the sufferings of the human race. If this age is to rise above itself it will do so only because it has a part in this "fellowship of His sufferings." The doctrine of the cross is not a formula to be grasped by the mind, but a principle to be practiced in life. The hope of mankind lies along the line of fruitful intelligence and sensible suffering.

Fort Hill Boys Hi-Y Ends First Half Year Plans

New Officers To Be Elected On April 19

Attendance at Easter sunrise services at Fort Hill last week marked the end of the Fort Hill Boys' Hi-Y extra activities for the first session of the year. New officers will be elected April 19 and second half activities will begin, Richard Dailey, president of the club, said.

This year marks the first time the members of the Boys' Hi-Y have divided their program into two parts. The first half began in October. The system was designed so that the club would be progressive and active at the beginning of each school year without delay.

The organization for a new school year actually takes place the previous April and only juniors or sophomores are eligible to hold office at the time.

"This year the club has had a very successful and well rounded program under the new setup," Dailey related. "We have participated in civic, recreational and religious activities."

Some of the outstanding work done by the group included a program of interdenominational speakers representing the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic religions; a semi-formal Salute Dance honoring the graduates who went into the armed services; Thanksgiving Day church attendance; sending a student with all expenses paid to the United Nations; participation in Youth and Government Forums; distributing Community Chest posters; selling Thanksgiving Day programs; presenting the Hi-Y and Faculty basketball game.

Other activities included contributing to a movie projector for the YMCA presenting a sound, technicolor religious motion picture, "The Pilgrimage Play," and sponsoring a basketball team in the City Rec League.

Present officers of the group are Dailey, William Thuss, vice president; Donald Brake, chaplain; John Parks, treasurer; Robert DeHaven, secretary; Davis Ferguson, historian; and Jack Corrick, sergeant-at-arms.

The host club at Oakland served a buffet luncheon following the meeting.

Suspect Arson In Mine Fire Near Kingwood

$25,000 Blaze Stops Coal Production

KINGWOOD, W. Va., April 1 (AP) — A fire which caused an estimated $25,000 damage to a non-union coal company's tipple today was labeled a "plain case of arson" by Kingwood Fire Chief Scott Bundorf.

Bundorf, who made the damage estimate, said the blaze destroyed most of the tipple and tipple equipment at the Borgman Coal Company, located three miles south of Kingwood between old State Route 26 and new State Route 26.

State Police began an investigation, but reported that they still were unable late today to inspect the tipple ruins closely because of intense heat.

Bundorf said the fire was discovered about 7:45 a.m. by taxi driver Charles Latham of Tunnelton, who called the Kingwood Volunteer Fire Department. The fire chief said the structure was nearly demolished, however, by the time firemen arrived.

Mine Superintendent Fred Bobo said the mine normally employs 120 men. A smaller force has been working recently, however, because of picketing activities.

Bobo said that a ramp and part of a bin were all that were saved from the tipple and its equipment.

The state fire marshal's office was expected to send a representative here tomorrow to conduct an investigation.

Miners Take Traditional Holiday

Coal miners in 27 coal producing states are honoring the man who won them the eight-hour day by remaining away from work today on a contractual holiday.

"John Mitchell Day" is celebrated in the bituminous (soft coal) fields each April 1. Since the holiday fell on a Sunday, the nation's 400,000 diggers celebrate the day today.

Mitchell, an early president of the United Mine Workers, is honored by the miners for his achievement 53 years ago in winning the men an eight-hour day.

Speechmaking, parades and music will highlight celebrations throughout the coal fields. Two big rallies are planned in the Pittsburgh District—one in nearby New Kensington and the other at Monongahela. West Virginia miners plan another program at Clarksburg.

Union miners in the Tri-State Area are participating in the general holiday observance, but no formal celebration has been scheduled.

He received possible fractured skull, brain concussion and back injuries according to hospital authorities. Bakery officials said he was climbing down the ladder when it slipped out from under him.

In another accident Saturday, Bonnie W. Wilhelm, 8-year-old daughter of Carl H. Wilhelm, RFD No. 3, was taken to Allegany Hospital where she was X-rayed for possible skull injuries, after the car driven by her father collided with another driven by P. E. Both drivers were arrested on careless driving charges by city police and will be tried in Police Court April 14.

Wave Of Thefts Continues In Cumberland

Police Probing Recent Burglaries

Another in the current wave of thefts has been reported to city police.

Charles Abbott, attendant at the Holland Service Station, corner of Mechanic and Bedford Streets, told City Detective Ernest M. Powell last evening that a man took between 20 and 30 dollars from the station's cash register.

Police were notified at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. Abbott said that a man came to the service station to inquire about parking rates. He entered the station and in the meantime Abbott left to wait on another customer.

Upon his return, Abbott said, the man had left and when he opened the register for change for the customer, the bills and some change had been taken.

Detective Powell is continuing an investigation.

Police are also investigating the theft of approximately $200 from the home of Franklin Jolley, 9 South Allegany Street.

Detective Thomas J. See said the burglar left behind a considerable amount of money after gaining entrance through a cellar door between 12:30 p.m. Thursday and 5:35 p.m. Friday.

After forcing a key from a door leading to the floor above, the intruder pried open a cedar chest containing a strong box.

Also under investigation is a breaking and entering attempt at the Cut Rate Shoe Store, 165 Baltimore Street. A would-be burglar removed putty from around a pane of glass but was unable to reach the lock inside.

Police said the entry attempt was made on the second floor of the building, which houses two apartments.

Reforestation Keeps Watershed In Top Condition

Some 15,000 pine trees will be planted in the Lake Gordon section as part of a program to keep the watershed of the Evitts Creek Water Company in top condition, George M. Hitchcock, superintendent, announced yesterday.

The three-year-old trees include white pine, hemlock, and red pine furnished by the Pennsylvania Department of Forest and Waters at a nominal cost in connection with the reforestation plan at the watershed.

Hitchcock said the trees arrived this week and were heeled in to await planting during the next two weeks.

The trees will be planted in the area south and east of Lake Gordon to replace second growth timber cut down this year under the direction of the Pennsylvania and Maryland forestry departments.

In connection with a plan of woodlot management, some 312,000 board feet of timber will be cut down in 1952 on land of the Evitts Creek Water Company.

In past years, lumber for the company's use has been secured free as a result of deals with sawers who cut down and prepare stumpage on a percentage basis.

The property has also yielded a considerable amount of lumber for the City of Cumberland, Hitchcock said.

About 2,500 of the 4,000 acres of property owned by the Evitts Creek Water Company is in woodland.

Hitchcock explained that the maintenance of a good stand of timber on the watershed is vital to Cumberland's water supply.

Were forests to become depleted, erosion would set in, allowing the rapid run off of water which would be vitally needed during dry months.

Vigorous growths of timber and other vegetation, Hitchcock said, literally soak up the water during wet spells and dole it out gradually, so an adequate flow of water into the dams is assured.
